

Chasing Tigers

ascend like a dragon,
rising
into the light
challenging the reflection
in your eyes

your intentions
easily determined by those that should not be privy to your heart's deepest desires wild tiger lily,

flying flower
searching for somewhere
to take root,
grow and
bloom into the light

finding no safe haven
or suitable ground
you continue
toward the horizon

but the horizon
recedes as you approach
always unreachable;
it offers false hope,
impossible dreams,
disappointment
and uncertainty

never allowing itself
to be traversed,
remaining elusive
yet always tantalising, alluring

let it go,
find action in non-action;
location in dis-location,
if you would find your prize

descend now,
allow your dreams
and aspirations
to settle in reality

sighing,
purring at times
how easily you
glide in and out of my arms
