The short answer is NO! Why? Simply because Tony Abbott, in the most callous, deceitful, calculated manner LIED profusely to gain office. Abbott's dishonesty and treachery far exceeds anything in Australian electoral history, no former leader has lied to the extent that Tony Abbott lied and misled the electorate to gain office and why legal proceedings to legitimately remove this FRAUDULENT character from office have not occurred to date is beyond reason.

Tony Abbott, criminal fraud

I need not labour the point that Tony Abbott is a duplicitous lying scoundrel of the lowest moral type, that fact is widely known; however, something is seriously amiss in a democratic society where this type of unsavoury criminal character is permitted by the public and state apparatuses to continue in the office which he stole from other more honest and legitimate contenders. At the very least another election with strict guidelines regarding fraud, duplicity and dishonesty should be held; whether or not Abbott should pay for his CLEARLY fraudulent CRIMINAL activities is a matter for the judiciary, which is oddly very quiet on the subject.

I signal an alarm bell for Australian society -- remember, this is not the criminal USA where fraud, deceit and criminality have been institutionalised. Australia and its traditional values cannot tolerate for an instant anyone gaining the highest office in the land by FRAUD.
