

Short-changed

digital florescence on tiny screens, lighting up distractions, embedded with self-loathing, insecurity, vanity and fake gratification, are u 'liked?'

looking always at self, ur own reflection - selfies are simply narcissistic infections; Instagram, Facebook and the rest are the diseases of the age cultivating profiles, creating a digital encyclopaedia for 'others' to read - enslaved youth starving for acceptance/appreciation, yet too often it ends in alienation and depression.

'likes' and 'follows,' feel good pills, but don't stop scrolling, it's better than television just remember it's your decision... is it wrong or right or good or bad?
it's just the way it is and its rather sad, as life goes on in the real world of interaction, expansion and satisfaction follow the mindless, soul-less digital crowd, just another dazed drone or be left to walk alone, or on ur feet
