

Watershed Event - Indigenous Australians Declare Sovereignty

Well, numerous Oz governments asked for it, and the very best of luck to the North Queensland Yidindji people for seceding from the antiquated crown and buffoon Abbott government, which serves the global elite and not the Australian people.

I could hardly believe the report on the ABC's 'Lateline,' real news for a change and news that matters. The entire population is tired of the irrelevant, Washington controlled crap Oz media presents as 'news', shallow propaganda is a far more accurate term.

However, tonight presenter Tony Jones, who is known to kow-tow to the powers, presented some real news for all Australians and the world. Original Australian, Jeremy Geia, now known by his tribal name, Murrumu, was featured with other leading originals on the program and what a breath of fresh air it was. Sovereignty, in a word, and that concept applies to every human being on the planet currently enslaved/oppressed by unrepresentative, corrupt governments.

The declaration may sound a bit a fanciful but white British colonial invaders that declared Australia uninhabited, though over three million natives had occupied this land for hundreds of thousands of years, are now faced with a legal and political nightmare. It wasn't enough that settlers were virtually given carte blanc to exterminate tribals on land coveted by the crown, colonialists instituted various laws and measures to legally commit cultural and physical genocide, however, they failed to 'kill them all' or extinguish the culture, the spirits of the mercilessly slaughtered now speak through the mouths of their descendants and hopefully formal recognition at the UN will follow - personally, the choice between the Abbott government and the Yidindji nation makes it easy, please keep us informed of developments regarding citizenship and passports.

The British Empire made a fatal mistake by not acknowledging native occupants and entering into treaties, which may have legally contained -- unrecognised to this day -- indigenous people. The British legal and political system adopted by Australia continues to recognise the antiquated British monarchy as its head of State for pete's sake, so secession is made much simpler, as the majority of Australians TODAY have no ties to Britain.

The failure of successive governments to declare a Republic complete with a Bill of Rights, which includes ALL Australians has now caught up on the servile, spineless puppets in Canberra -- the 'Australian' flag continues to bear the Union Jack, though cringing unrepresentative governments now kow-tow to Washington. And Washington is the worst possible imperial power to serve today; the traitorous Aussie defence minister, ever so ready to serve Washington and its illegal wars, was unable to name the leader of ISIL in a recent television interview even though he has committed hundreds of Aussie troops to Iraq. Seceding gains more appeal by the minute!

I cannot describe the joy of witnessing native 'Australians' assert their inalienable rights and identities as the original stewards of this land.

Murrumu welcomes all, black, white, brown, everyone, to his newly founded nation in North Queensland and I know many would accept the invitation to secede from the crapulous creeds and corrupt antics of foreign-serving, unrepresentative Australian governments.

However, the move by the indigenous people of North Queensland is not without its challenges, as Murrumu's young son was refused entry into a State run kindergarten, so Murrumu opted to home educate his son and 'home' includes the land with its forests, rivers and creeks, to which native people have a deep spiritual connection and of course are loath to despoil, pollute or ravage their home - does that sound appealing to YOU?

Murrumu proudly displayed his nation's number plate on his car and we hope that soon he will brandish his nation's passport and flag for the entire world to see.

Follow the link below for a rather tame but at least covered story of a viable alternative to the pathetic status quo that exists in Oz today:

[Please note, these types of initiatives only succeed if heavily supported, interested parties should contact Murrumu in the Cairns region and apply for citizenship. Also, it is interesting to note that the 'public broadcaster' failed to provide contact information, however, that should not present too difficult a problem, inquiries should first be directed to the ABC.]
