

Oz Major Political Parties - servility to Banker and Corporate interests Confirmed

by bruce Wednesday, Apr 22 2015, 8:08am

international / prose / post

Opposition shadow treasurer Chris Bowen, from the (LOL) so-called Australian 'worker's party,' divulged his party's taxation policy on the ABC 7.30 program tonight and you guessed it, like his counterpart in the serving conservative party 'his' policies targeted wage earners NOT tax avoiding multi-nationals and mega banks - surprise, surprise, for no-one!

Chris Bowen, punk and lapdog to the elite

Labor intends to make up revenue shortfalls by increasing tax rates on wage earners, specifically on superannuation and a number of smaller areas. It seems that taxing those that benefit most from Oz -- in the hundreds of millions of profit dollars -- have had a not unexpected reprieve from their other owned puppet party. Recall how Labor's treasurer Paul Keating deregulated the parasitic banks and allowed them to inflict service charges and a plethora of other fees on customers, which was and remains an entirely non-production and non-performance based GIFT from the then serving puppet Labor treasurer.

During the interview Bowen let it slip that the governor of the New York Fed, the heart of the debt-slaving global reserve banking system, agreed with the 'plan' and Labor's measurers, and why wouldn't he, as it lets all the big earners and tax avoiders off the hook!

The conservatives have also targeted wage earners and not corporations in their feeble strategy to compensate for the revenue/tax void left by mega-corporations and other large 'profit shifters.'

Well thanks Chris, for revealing that it was really the big banks that dictate policy to the Labor and Liberal parties, you reprehensible sell-out. So what's new, NOTHING, including the insouciant attitude of the hapless population that hasn't got a clue and remains largely captured by the two party-one stable, charade of democratic choice?

The likely outcome of course will be felt at the polls with true representative independents gaining in popularity and likely to hold the balance of power in BOTH houses. Good work lackey parties, you have inadvertently freed Oz from your traitorous, unrepresentative influence sooner than expected.

The winner of course is the Australian people, subject of course to withdrawing their support for parties that favour elite minority interests rather than the wishes of the people.

A message to both lackey parties is warranted - who are you knee-walking, traitorous, sell-outs think you're fooling? If you wish to have any credibility whatsoever then legislate, as the UK government has done, and tax ALL profits made in Oz by transnationals and banks, at the highest possible rate and get off the peoples' back, you parasite-serving traitorous scumbags!

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-1573.html>