

The World is Facing Hard Reality and Failing

by luke Friday, May 15 2015, 9:57am

international / prose / post

Indeed, for thinking aware people I could leave it at the title, however, as we are an innately social and co-operative species I'll spell it out for those that 'struggle to see what is before their noses.'

Unbridled, vampiric corporatism and its insatiable appetite have brought us to the brink of extinction via pollution/climate change and the violent scrambling for what remains of finite energy resources. The US in its supreme caveman wisdom has retrogressively decided to use the club and just take what it wants from others that rightfully own whatever the corporate controlled US covets. It has embarked on a perpetual war ideology/strategy that both fills the coffers of its corporate masters and enables it to steal precious resources from vanquished nations – let's not worry about the cost to humanity and the environment, there are profits to be made and bounty to be stolen, a plainly very sick logic that America's elite ruling psychopaths embrace.

No other nation on earth has ideologically embraced perpetual war, the most primitive and ineffective method of attempting to achieve one's goals in a social world, but tell that to a homicidal nut case, yes, America remains the world's leading civilian killing, plundering nation by a country mile.

I need not cite China's approach of negotiation and doing peaceful business in a co-operative manner so everybody wins – that's no good, America wants it ALL, like the delinquent disturbed child that it is, and yes, if you're looking for the bully on the block, you don't have to look far!

But enough focus on a pathological nation populated by avaricious primitive pigs, banjo players and 'exceptional' ignoramuses. Am I being unfair, I don't think so – world statistical positive ratings for developed nations bear this obvious reality out?

Instead, I will attempt to return to reason, the cure for all manner of insanities, and that 'reason' refers directly to humanity's innate, positive attributes, which are what enabled humanity to survive and eventually become the dominant species -- and they are mutual aid, co-operation and assisting those less able or fortunate. Yes, these are the keys to humanity's success and momentary but tenuous dominance to date. However, the psychopaths that run the USA will have none of it, perpetual conflict, destruction, misery and war are the answer for psychopaths, as we know.

And so, as humanity faces the almost insurmountable crises that confront it today; it becomes very clear that the world must again co-operate in the spirit of mutual assistance if it is to have a glimmer of hope to persist into the future. It won't be easy, as we've left it very late indeed, but it is possible if we all come together and pool all our talents, intellectual and other human resources to find effective answers and positive, constructive, solutions – the entire world must co-operate today as the solutions must be universally adopted.

It becomes very clear to any sane person that reflects on these matters, that co-operation, peaceful negotiations and mutual respect, provide the only means for survival of the species. But as we know from its appalling, homicidal, psychopathic track record, the USA will do everything in its power to divide us and prevent the world uniting in order to solve the urgent problems that we all face. Nevertheless, one nation among many regardless of the 'power' it imagines it possesses, is no match for a united league of sane nations - we all must teach wayward, violent child America by EXAMPLE - either that or we go down with it.

For those that now fail to see the obvious truth and the urgency for immediate change to a positive, harmonious approach, I recommend banjo lessons.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-1614.html>