

Democracy, where is it?

by will Wednesday, May 20 2015, 1:29am

international / prose / post

Name one nation that has installed a government that represents the majority? Do your best cuz you won't find one. So the next time you hear any politician, use terms such as 'democracy, liberty or freedom,' laugh out loud, but not too loud because the joke is on you.

Every western government today serves elite financial and corporate interests, a well known reality. What is characteristic of these governments is their brazen treason and deceit, therefore by consequence, the contempt they openly display for the people/commoners. Their job as they see it is to lie their way into government and then serve their corporate masters, an unrepresentative bunch of white collar criminals and rogues -- plain to see.

Furthermore, governments ensure that the wealthy elites and their servants in high places are never held accountable for the crimes they routinely commit, past, present and future, though those crimes amount to destroying the global economy and pursuing a heinous, homicidal perpetual war ideology -- that reality is not a travesty, it is a game they play in hell, and that hell is the world the masses have created today. Now laugh out loud before a mirror, if you are able.

The two (owned) major party system has been reduced to a transparent scam and the wishes and aspirations of the majority are all but ignored in favour of pursuing elitist agendas.

In Australia, the situation is raw, a scoundrel and lying dunce of a politician, Tony Abbott, brazenly LIED his way into office and then immediately attempted to punish the electorate with harsh European austerity measures in one of the wealthiest per capita nations on earth, how so? Because today the distasteful and illegal reality of treasonous government has become naturalised, people are made to feel it is normal to be deceived by our leaders and then shafted with cruel and oppressive policies. Well I have news, it is far from normal and no-one that lives in a democracy should tolerate such brazen contempt and deception.

I could go on and list the myriad injustices that populations are faced with today, however, it would always lead back to the real problem, toleration by the masses of crime and oppression and that situation is something I am unable to remedy alone.

It is not enough to write about the deplorable current state of affairs, intervention and restoration are required, the masses have traded their freedoms for the false claim that governments are keeping us safe (from created bogeymen) while in fact governments all over the western world are implementing police states in order to keep the minority elites they serve safe from the exploited, debt-enslaved (by design) masses.

And so we arrive at the remedy once again, which is direct intervention/action or actively withdrawing your support for the current outrageous status quo -- clearly, there is no other way as widespread toleration of lying, duplicitous politicians and the criminal actions of minority elites has led to a global system that is rotten to the core.

If you wish to live in a democracy then restore representative government and ensure that the law applies to everyone without exception -- now that shouldn't be difficult. Nevertheless, I am a realist and understand how the masses have been mass media neutered; so in full view of reality I recommend radiation-proof bomb shelters because very soon we are all going to pay for our complacency and the elites couldn't be happier as it would reduce population numbers and make their job a lot easier.

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-1621.html>