

The Tragic case of Flawed Personality Julian Assange

Fellow Australian John Pilger has recently written another overtly biased article in support of Julian Assange, whose situation is largely the result of his own making, notwithstanding the known behaviour of criminal lackey governments that overtly flout justice and serve the interests of the most criminal, mass murdering government of them all, Washington.

Julian Assange

Assange's predicament of self-incarceration is sad but was it an entirely unexpected outcome? The criminal USA made no secret of the fact that it intended to contain him one way or the other and even spoke of cornering him in the situation in which he now finds himself, deprived of even the light of day. So, John, bleating ineffectively about injustice is almost as blind and futile a pursuit as attempting to buck the system while having one's face on the cover of TIME magazine.

Assange is reputed to be a "gifted" hacktivist of exceptional intelligence and yet failed to see the obvious, which failure I would attribute to his clearly narcissist flaw, a fatal personality flaw in elite hacker circles. Assange bathed in his notoriety while relatively 'free,' and clearly enjoyed his new found status as the most notorious hacktivist of them all but as any elite hacker would tell you, this flaw would eventually bring him completely undone.

All known ethical hackers that do not adhere to the cardinal rule of ANONYMITY either end up in prison, dead or worse, forced to work for the criminal governments they despise. Chelsea (Bradley) Manning, who was primarily responsible for putting Assange on the international map, was betrayed by one of these flawed personality types though that scumbag's integrity was always questionable; it should be mentioned that Manning was also abandoned by Assange who was stuck in a situation, so he claims, of creating more legal trouble for Manning if he openly assisted, a clearly false assumption/excuse as the case from start to finish was obviously a Red Queen affair straight out of Wonderland. Criminal governments and their state apparatuses always have the last say and so deluding oneself into believing that justice is possible today becomes the height of absurd self-delusion.

Hacktivism, whether by genus or circumstance are usually of the highest moral integrity, which character attribute forces them to expose and fight the nefarious social forces they oppose, but that is a given and has been for decades in hacker circles, all hackers are aware that any major event immediately leads authorities to mount a retaliatory attack, which they do rather ineptly when faced with elite, ANONYMOUS hackers, no-one knows who hacked Sony or a US government database that revealed reams of personal, potentially useful information to other 'players' - such are the benefits to hackers of large databases which foolish governments and technology companies have created in order to profit from, monitor and oppress the people. There is no such thing as a secure network that is not a LAN and LANs pose the problem of users, such as Ed Snowden, who is not a hacker but a highly trained (CIA, military intel, NSA) spy or agent.

Assange, however, was the flamboyant, notorious exception, so regardless of the cost to criminal governments and their already trashed reputations, Assange had to be contained and stopped, though Assange, to his credit, continues to publish hidden material that compromises evil elites, notwithstanding he has little else to pursue.

If any lesson is to be learned from Assange's folly it's that ANONYMITY is the hard and fast rule that should never be compromised.

Thanks to personality flawed Assange and other factors the result is the evolution of the so-called 'dark' or 'underground' net, which today is larger and more active than the aptly named surface 'world wide web;' governments have little effect in that sphere and continue to fall victim to the ever increasing skills of its Uber hacker elite, which it should be said will soon, inevitably turn the tide against corrupt, criminal governments and all the horror and destruction they cause in OUR world.

If you really wish to help Assange, John, try doing something constructive rather than endlessly bleating about injustice, which is the unfortunate way of the world today.
