

Gaga and Assange -- it's all about us!

by mira Tuesday, Oct 9 2012, 11:02am

international / prose / post

2 tragic cases of (NPD) Narcissistic Personality Disorder

It's a sign of the vacuous content of today's media that two media addicted narcissists meet and pose for a shot. But really, the only thing these two could have in common is their self love -- TS Eliot is rolling in his 'hollow' grave!

Lady Gaga and Assange pose together

After Assange's somewhat 'removed' attempt to enter American electoral politics, I suppose we could expect such an incongruous pairing -- a pop diva dyke empty-head and a failed anonymous hacker.

However, Assange is about to publish a book on 'resistance' and the internet. 'Some would say' it's about time a man that claims to be a journalist has finally written something!

According to a Guardian report the book is largely based on one episode of Assange's short-lived show on RT dealing with 'cypherpunks' -- has anyone seen my pimple cream?

Co-authors featured in the RT episode and Assange have all seen better days they are clearly out of the (hacking) loop, as their FACES in the media reveal -- the cardinal rules of hacking are s-t-e-a-l-t-h/invisibility and a-n-o-n-y-m-i-t-y, not media whoring or self-indulgent parading.

We shall see, but it should be noted that the vanguard of today's hacker elite consider Assange passé and a bit of a tragic joke, which would make the duo of Gaga and Assange appropriate.

<http://tinyurl.com/9afbaty>