

Why Do We Insist On Lying To Ourselves About a Vulnerable Ruling Elite?

by Sylvain Lamoureux via jaxie - OpEd News Saturday, Aug 1 2015, 3:55am

international / prose / post

As I read, learn and live I see the ever-increasing number of peoples who claim to be "awake". These people with their research, documents, web links; all "evidence" that they must be "awake" lament the existence of the elite 1% controlling the world, poisoning our water and food, wreaking havoc on our financial systems, chem-trails, drugging, killing, torturing, imprisoning... the list is endless. What they don't see is that it is not the 1% but rather the 99% that are the enablers of this catastrophe that we refer to as civilization and which hinders any kind of progression into human evolution.

Let's take the 1%, which we abhor, into perspective: OXFAM had released a report (short-lived in the media but Justin Bieber was doing something reckless) that 85 people in the world control over half the world's wealth. A little simple mathematics: 1% of 7,000,000,000 (billion) people is 70,000,000 million people (drop 2 zeros) yet only 85 own half the world's resources making them the 0.00000012 %. So why is it that we make it into such an acceptable number as 1% instead of seeing how utterly ridiculous it actually is?

Now let us talk about the "awakened": perhaps there are 70 million people who are beginning to realize that things are not as they seem and are far from optimal in the course of human development (awake). 70 million people seems like a lot but really it would only represent 1% of the human population. Now these "awake" individuals all see that the majority of the population (the 99%) are asleep at the wheel and are not doing enough to keep us from driving over the edge.

The "Sheeple" (as many, including myself, have called them) can be seen accepting laws that remove their (and my) rights in order to feel "secure", they defend the rich because they too aspire to wealth and a life of ease, they defend the system by repeating what they have heard of other systems (the devil you know versus the one you don't), they say things like "That's just the way it is." or "What can I do?"; basically they help to enable everything that the 0.00000012% want to accomplish through their fears, acceptance and apathy.

Now here is the tricky part; how do you blame 99% of the people (including ourselves)? It is far easier to lay the blame externally on the 1% than to see our very own complacency within the problems of our species. To see it as it really is would mean that everyone would have to do an honest introspection of their very being; everything that they have learned that makes them believe who they are. They would have to have an honest and moral look at the world around us, which we all have helped to shape in one form or another. They would have to delve into the unknown and want real "change" (no not the Obama kind) rather than being content and fearful of anything that might upset the "balance" in which they find solace. Sounds like far too much work and perhaps even a bit namby-pamby.

I simply and humbly ask with these thoughts that people stop using the 1% tag/program and at least start using the the more accurate figure of, 0.00000012 percent when discussing the ruling elite so we can all see the absurdity of the situation, and perhaps then reflect and discern information (even this piece) more effectively before simply repeating whatever is presented; like calling money what it has become - life credits - but I digress, that is for another time perhaps.

Peace.

<http://tinyurl.com/nlkx2t2>

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-1758.html>