

The Yuan Devaluation and the so-called 'currency war'

by jake Saturday, Aug 15 2015, 1:21am

international / prose / post

China maintains its sovereignty by owning its own currency; that means it has not surrendered its currency/sovereignty to Wall Street bankers and the Global Reserve Banking cartel with headquarters in New York. One need only look at who heads those banks to realise it's a Jewish monetary game designed to enslave the entire world, however, China will have none of it, it plays according to its own best interests not those of a criminal, largely Jewish, western banking elite that is now chronically addicted to printing money from thin air - known as quantitative easing (QE). It should be noted that QE has become a permanent feature of the fake toilet paper economy today, and as every economist is aware 'paper shuffling' as opposed to real production, which is China's strength, inevitably leads to economic implosion and ruin. This fate awaits America the Eurozone, Japan and numerous other nations that subscribe to the Jewish banker scam.

While most national economists are acutely aware that the 'international' currency game is a sham designed to enslave nations and enrich the elite, there is no other game in town, so China buffers it's economy and the value of its national currency with huge foreign currency reserves, which it should be noted, only have value while New York Jews are able to maintain this destined to fail game/ruse on the world.

Western currencies today devalue by over printing/supply, however, China has been caught out due to its tight relationship with the US dollar, which is essential while the greenback remains the world's default currency, notwithstanding it is inherently valueless its 'value' is wholly derived from subscription, which is under threat by new Asian investment banks, I would add.

The Yuan has not been affected by other currency devaluations as the Chinese do not engage in over printing so its government has adjusted the situation, which business and reason demands, China has rightfully decreased the value of its currency as its higher value has impacted on trade, particularly exports, which have been suffering for some time, so devaluing the yuan would seem the most effective means of rectification and judging by the hysterical reaction of the western banking elite, it has succeeded.

Nevertheless, it's a very tight and dangerous game; if China with its emerging nation partners, apply too much pressure too soon then they would trounce the greenback and send the global economy into a tail spin, so slowly, slowly, is the order of the day though the collapse of the greenback is inevitable, any budget aware housewife would tell you that you simply cannot survive by creating evermore debt credit on the slate.

However, the major impact of this currency game is lost in the fog of economic verbiage, distraction and outright bullshit. People, the masses, are forgotten though they are effectively debt-enslaved by this ruse/game, Greece is a very good example of the impact/fate that awaits all foolish subscriber nations that have surrendered their currency to known rogues and avaricious Jewish bankers, which currently control the global economy - but not for long.

While these mega-banker interests continue to maintain major influence they are aware that China with its new partners, which all produce real goods/wealth and refrain from toilet paper shuffling, constitute the largest threat they have ever faced. So if the Jewish (Chicago school) of neocon ideology has taught us anything it is that the US will go to war to protect its elite. The longer the US waits in this regard the weaker it becomes as China is racing to match America militarily, it has already overcome it economically, notwithstanding that printing money from thin air to debt-enslave the world is a game that has passed its use-by date.

It's over for the western rogues no matter which way you look at it.

So it seems that only two options are available for the world: 1. the masses wake to the ruse of debt-slavery and remove their paper shackles, or 2. America will go to war over one pretext or another to save its criminal elite from the fate that awaits them - which is hanging by their necks from the windows of their crystal towers.

In other words the jig is up one way or the other - but put your soon to be worthless money on war, as 'perpetual war' is a stated doctrine of the neocons and their Jewish banker supporters.

<http://www.newsmax.com/Finance/Economy/peter-schiff-dollar-china-economy/2015/08/11/id/669647/>

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-1784.html>