Bombing targets in Syria without a formal request from its leader amounts to declaring war -- that is what servile, spineless dog Abbott is considering. The fact that the US created the mess in the Middle East seems to escape Abbott, we were all taught as children to take responsibility for our actions, however, the US takes a different self-serving stance, when it soils its nappy it wants its lackey vassals to wipe its arse and clean the mess for it -- give international law and common sense a break, Abbott.

Obama pets his dog, Abbott

The fact that Abbott is even considering this request reveals what a thorough lackey this useless dunce really is -- there is nothing to consider, without legal authority Australia would be declaring war on a nation that has not and does not threaten it -- a highly illegal act in itself. Perhaps Abbott should fly to Washington so he could physically insert his nose in Obama's black arse, after all, his gutless mentor John Howard demonstrated how it should be done with Bush, much to Australia's eternal shame. However, the major consequence of this absurd criminal action would be to attract reprisals from the attacked nation, and Syria's trained special ops are far more deadly than any inbred terrorist's. Good one Tony, bring America's war home to our shores, you traitorous moronic clown, some Aussie patriots may even consider dropping you -- 'consider' that!

Story from Herald Sun follows:

Australia considers US request to bomb IS targets in Syria

AUSTRALIA is considering a US request to launch air strikes against Islamic State fighters in Syria in an unprecedented departure from Australian foreign policy that could spark political division at home.

Prime Minister Tony Abbott said Friday that his government had received a request from the Pentagon to send Australia's six F/A-18 Super Hornet jet fighters based in Dubai into Syria to attack the militants in their stronghold.

The war planes have been striking Islamic State targets in northern Iraq since October last year. But Australia has baulked at war in Syria without the invitation of a legitimate Syrian government or the firm legal basis of a United Nation Security Council resolution.

Mr Abbott says the government had yet to decide on the request. Opposition leader Bill Shorten questioned its legality.
