

America's Great Leap Backward

Consider if you will, the circumstances that led to today's permanent imperialist wars.

After the collapse of the Soviet Union and with China slowly emerging from a pushbike society, the USA was at a threshold, to lead the world unchallenged into a co-operative peace of united nations or to make a retrogressive blunder and opt for military conquest, Empire!

Unfortunately, with over a million dead civilians and numerous destabilised nations to show for it, America chose the destructive option.

Under the lead of Wall St, Washington Zionist Jews and a few rabid gentiles, America's choice is all too clear today -- Empire, regardless of the cost in innocent lives and to the relative peace of the world.

After over a decade of constant war, the USA is clearly COMMITTED to its perverse course, as the recent request of the CIA to expand its drone fleet indicates. It seems it hasn't yet occurred to America that human social evolution has come a long way since the theocratic and military empire models of ancient Egypt and Rome; notwithstanding that both empires FAILED when they had everything -- except the human will to freedom -- going for them!

Today, America's choice promises that it will be the shortest lived empire in the history of the world -- humanity has come a very long way psychologically and socially in a few thousand years. In other words the masses will not tolerate oppression by military force, or theocratic psychological repression; thousands of years of growing awareness and education has ensured a completely new mass consciousness, which US short-sightedness has failed to recognise or factor into their equations for global conquest.

As ugly as the likely prospects for the future appear to be, it is not the point I wish to make. America's disappointing retrogressive return to brutality and the law of the jungle is the point I wish to highlight. America's tragic retrogressive choice defines the failure of an ideology and the subversion of national social/moral ideals -- not too long ago America was a beacon of democracy, freedom and liberty; however, with the advent of new 'laws' such as indefinite detention without trial or charge and the social acceptance of presidential, mafia style, kill lists, the future for America looks very bleak indeed!

America now plans to destabilise the entire Middle East and plunge the WORLD into what it thinks will be a limited nuclear war, but as we shall all soon discover, there are no limits to the primitive savagery of war when so many nations and divergent interests are involved and directly affected!

We are all aware that we, the GLOBAL masses, are able to alter the destructive course our leaders have chosen for us -- history bears witness to the fact; however, the current clime indicates that no effective major social revolutions or interventions will occur in the near future; so in order to clarify for readers the true import of this piece, I would openly and clearly state it is written for the record only, for current and future historians. Not everyone was asleep, or unaware of the consequences of America's social descent and moral bankruptcy.

In conclusion I would add that China is no longer a 'pushbike' society, it has become a global superpower to be reckoned with -- the world has never seen such rapid progress! Russia, however, is currently part of the problem though, unlike America, it could change direction overnight.

Nevertheless, the next few years promise to be the most dramatic the world has ever seen; blind elitist fools that imagine they are in control have no idea how other non-state forces are able to tip the scales in any direction they choose, in fact, they are waiting for the opportunity, which major destabilisations and conflicts offer, to apply their determining influence.
