

'Barking dogs ...' ISIL Video Threatens Russia

international / prose / post

A video recently released by the media arm of ISIL has threatened attacks on Russian soil, "Soon, very soon, the blood will spill like an ocean." Note the primitive, overtly homicidal and barbaric wording of the 'threat' and then consider that Russia is a superpower that would no doubt immediately act to eliminate any threat to its nation/people. In other words, if ISIL dares to provoke Russia Putin would then be able to legally launch major attacks in Central Asia and elsewhere to eliminate the threat, and so a heavy price would be exacted from regions harbouring terrorists.

Leaders of those Muslim regions should ponder the implications of any attacks on innocent people anywhere and immediately act to ensure that murderous groups are neutralised. The consequences of not doing so would effectively render those leaders and regions under legal Russian control/occupation, though a bunch of Israeli/US backed trained maniacs have never seen reason or comprehend civilised behaviour, they simply do whatever their masters order. Washington and Tel Aviv may have just played into Putin's hands.

However, the threat highlights the need for all civilised nations to unite and eliminate this terrorist threat from the face of the earth - which combined effort would easily and effectively rid the planet of this created scourge; yet the USA, Israel, and Gulf State monarchies continue to illegally support, arm and train these terrorist groups, now ask yourself the obvious question which the managed western mass media refuses to ask?

Story from the SMH follows:

Islamic State video threatens Russia

Moscow: Islamic State has released a video threatening attacks in Russia "very soon" in revenge for Russian bombing in Syria, the SITE monitoring group said on Thursday, and the Kremlin said Russian state security services would study the material.

Al-Hayat Media Centre, IS's media division directed at speakers of languages other than Arabic, released a video in Russian with chants of "Soon, very soon, the blood will spill like an ocean", SITE reported.

IS has previously called for attacks on Russia and the United States in revenge for strikes by their warplanes on its fighters in Syria.

Western intelligence officials suspect the ultra-hardline Sunni group of planting a bomb in a Russian passenger plane which crashed in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula on October 31, killing all 224 passengers and crew.

IS militants fighting Egyptian security forces in Sinai said they brought down the plane which was taking Russian tourists back home from the Egyptian tourist resort of Sharm al-Sheikh.

Russia's security agencies will undoubtedly look into a video released by IS that threatens attacks in Russia, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov says.

"I do not know the authenticity of this video, I do not know the authenticity of these sources, but in any case no doubt this will be material for review by our special [security] services," Mr Peskov told journalists on a conference call on Thursday.
