

The Only Thing that Survives a Black Hole is Consciousness

by nano Saturday, Nov 28 2015, 12:18am

international / prose / post

The reason being that consciousness, NOT mind, which is formulated by time-space/culture, is without physical measurable properties, it is of the essence of existence itself so is not incompatible with the forces that defy all known 'knowledge,' or mind productions that exist in and through black holes, which if understood correctly, are merely portals to other dimensions of existence completely distinct from our universe.

Consciousness, which few humans understand or are familiar with, is infinite as it is the essence of our personal being and indeed is the entire Be-ing of creation, which is 'infinity' - another term which expresses consciousness. Try to imagine existence without interference from the time-space limitations of the (cultural) mind, if you are able.

Black holes have always fascinated me even as a child as they are what binds galaxies together though they eventually consume everything they bind, in other words without black holes there would be no galaxies as we know them, which also implies no earth suns/stars or gaseous planets, bodies etc; however, black holes also destroy/consume/transform galaxies into, aha! Here finite words and descriptions fail for obvious reasons, so I'll offer a path to understanding and that is become a conscious being and 'see' for yourself as nothing in existence is separate from existence, you see how easy and simple it all is?

Becoming conscious simply involves the elimination of the constraining mind, which is the antithesis of consciousness as it is captured and formulated by time-space, indeed, mind is nothing more than its content, which is a series of culturally derived finite (measurable) signs, symbols and images, language in fact.

So attempting to think your way to infinity/reality is self-defeating as the opposite applies, and that is to 'un-think' your way to infinity/consciousness. Do not fuss with your mind, the hard work has all been done before by mystics, the most notable of which was/is Gautama Buddha, furthermore, he shared his experience with his fellow human beings and outlined a simple formula to attain liberation from mind and its agonising constraints, which method is exactly the same as I have described above using words not associated with philosophy or religion.

By allowing consciousness to flow freely we experience it as the most rarefied light, you see, what we 'think' is light has physical properties and is measurable whereas consciousness has no physical properties and is therefore immeasurable; however, the 'light' to which I refer does have qualities as distinct from properties. These qualities are accurately described as ineffable bliss - do not image existence came into being accidentally or is without purpose, its qualities are ecstatic bliss/love/joy, absolute Be-ing and absolute knowledge, as consciousness permeates all things or put more accurately is everything that is and is therefore the unifying principle, hence it quite naturally 'knows' all things.

Another quality of consciousness is kinesis; this is not difficult to understand as infinity by nature cannot stop or cease, as it would then end and become measurable or become finite, so its nature is also flux. Now consider the measurable or finite world of things which scientists are obsessed with; everything measurable is finite therefore not of the quality of infinity or REALITY, that is why Eastern philosophies refer to our finite world of things as illusion as everything finite is transitory, in other words, everything born must die or everything that begins must END whereas reality/consciousness persists forever as it is beginningless and endless.

However, it is preferable if you discover the truth of what is here being transcribed for yourself -- that is, you are already infinite/immortal/eternal if you free yourself from the finite constraints of mind, which enslaves and agonises you. However, you needn't believe me, believe the Buddha or better still, experience it for yourself - there is no other way.

Rig Veda Book 10 - HYMN CXIX. Indra

7 The heavens and earth themselves have not grown equal to one half of me

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

8 I in my grandeur have surpassed the heavens and all this spacious earth

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

9 Aha! this spacious earth will I deposit either here or there

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

10 In one short moment will I smite the earth in fury here or there:

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

11 One of my flanks is in the sky; I let the other trail below:

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

12 I, greatest of the Mighty Ones, am lifted to the firmament:

Have I not drunk of Soma juice?

[Soma is actually Consciousness, not a substance.]

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2002.html>