

“He who hesitates is Lost,” Mr Putin and Mr Xi

by mitch Monday, Dec 7 2015, 9:24pm

international / prose / post

The above well-known adage applies far more to geopolitics than interpersonal relations as is easily appreciated today. NATO/Turkey has effectively declared war on Russia, an intentional act (downing a Russian bomber engaged in UN sanctioned and legal military operations against international terrorism) to provoke and assess Putin's reaction. And to date Putin has reacted with 'words,' while the western alliance reacts with its military - you are supposed to be an intelligent man, coward notwithstanding, Mr Putin and your failure to act decisively to the increasing challenges you face has of course - as any military officer could have told you -- only intensified western alliance pressure/attacks against you, you mouse.

Where is the steely will and like-for-like response that former Soviet leaders were renowned for, any one of them would have immediately launched a precision missile attack on 'Sultan' Erdogan's new palace, razing it to the ground, preferably with him in it, which would have been an appropriate response among many other options? The onus would then have been on the western alliance to engage in an all-out nuclear war. But you missed that critical opportunity and allowed the west to exert evermore pressure on you, you cowardly, indecisive dunce!

And as for you Mr Xi, you yellow cowardly dog, if you imagine you could somehow remain neutral or inactive - you are living in denial, as China would be the next target of the US/NATO alliance of criminals -- America has made plain that it would not tolerate any other nation threatening its plan for global hegemony - I urge you to re-read the PNAC document, you rickshaw runner, Mr Xi.

This is a GLOBAL WAR for total control of the planet and its dwindling resources if you haven't noticed - therefore I urge, as a former military officer, Russian and Chinese generals, that are acutely aware of what is at stake, to intervene and save their respective nations and if that includes eliminating Putin and Xi, then do it, or become vassal slaves to America like so many other spineless, weak and TIMID nations. The western alliance cannot prevail against the combined military assets of Russia and China and they know it!

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2017.html>