

US/NATO Idiotic and Criminal Antics in Syria

Russia, as a result of the overt provocations by the US-NATO criminal alliance now has legal carte blanc to conduct its legal campaign against international terrorism in Syria, Iraq and elsewhere - another backfire in the stupid faces of Washington/Brussels' strategists.

Following the direct provocation by NATO/Turkey involving the downing of a Russian supersonic bomber conducting legal operations in Syria and posing no threat to Turkey, Russia has justifiably expanded its military arsenal to include devastating weaponry easily able to protect its forces against further aggression. Furthermore, it has supplied Syria with the means to protect its sovereign territory, particularly its airspace, and woe to the US/NATO illegal bombing campaign from here on, after all, puppet president Obama stated publicly that nations are entitled to protect their sovereignty, but as usual he seems to conveniently forget that right also applies to Syria.

I'm sure the results of US/NATO provocations, which were intended to place Putin on the back foot, did not go as intended, to say the least. So in desperation various almost simultaneous attacks by 'terrorists,' which the US, NATO and allied Gulf states openly support, have given various NATO powers an excuse (they imagine) to increase their bombing campaign on a sovereign state without any formal arrangement with its legitimate government. It follows that if NATO is silly enough to continue its clearly illegal campaign in Syria it would soon be raining NATO fighter jets and bombers from the sky, as these aircraft are sitting ducks faced with the advanced weaponry that Russia has been forced to deploy in the region.

But to return to the flimsy, panicked and legally erroneous justification for increased NATO military operations in Syria and Iraq. British PM David Cameron referred to recent criminal attacks on civilians in European nations as his justification for a greater British effort to confront these terrorists, which NATO laughingly supports in Syria, before they attack us again. He referred to ISIL in particular, a now known western alliance creation first deployed in Libya, however, ISIL is not a state or nation it is simply a murderous gang of criminal thugs and so Cameron's national military effort is misplaced, as the control of criminal thugs of any colour or stripe is PURELY a POLICE MATTER and I refer Cameron to the French POLICE operation in dealing with the Paris attack. However, NATO and the US have never allowed international law to stand in the way of their overt criminal agenda/operations over the past fifteen years, laws are continually flouted by NATO/US forces but unsurprisingly seem only to apply to their perceived opponents - laugh or cry now depending on your temperament, over these flagrant double standards and searing hypocrisies.

It simply boils down to NATO and US personnel and aircraft illegally intruding on Syrian sovereign territory and airspace being legally and justifiably shot down or otherwise eliminated. We would love to see the US-NATO criminal alliance attempt to defend their illegal actions in an international court of law of course without the presiding presence of Alice's Red Queen. The world is aware that criminal NATO and US forces only acknowledge international laws when it suits them - now who allowed that to OCCUR and continue UNCHALLENGED?
