

Have we Forgotten Peace?

by jude Thursday, Dec 24 2015, 1:20am

international / prose / post

A Christmas message

Swept along by the privately owned and CFR directed America/western mass media, most people have forgotten that peace exists. As a result of America adopting its new doctrine of 'perpetual war,' whether fought directly or (more commonly) by proxies, the 'news' has been dominated by war, conflict, terror and other assorted horrors that arise therefrom. The rest of the news is feeble titillation or popular distractions, and as the primary discourse goes so goes the culture.

But what of Peace and peaceful co-existence, it is no secret that peace and harmony are the heart's desire of the majority of human beings on this planet and to say that majority outnumbers the tiny, minority evil forces that have plunged the world into a nightmare is to state the sky is blue, an obvious fact?

So why is peace so evasive today, as the same human heart's desire has existed throughout history? Well, first peace has been abandoned from media discourse and replaced with discourse of war and conflict to the saturation point that many people now think conflict/war is the 'natural state of affairs,' however, we all know the opposite to be true. Peace is the natural preferred state though some conflict is inevitable at times, but to experience continuous, destructive turmoil, hardship and constant death, informs us that something is very wrong.

I need not elaborate; the causes of turmoil and the lack of peace are easily attributed to the majority whose actions and non-actions determine their condition/fate. Is the corrupt self-seeking rule of evil men to be tolerated, or should we assert our natural inclinations and desires and hold those psychopathic criminals to account and restore our governments and sacred institutions, which were designed to protect, foster and promote peaceful productive relations for all, not the conflict related profits for the evil few. War is about greed, selfishness and crime nothing else.

Are we up for the challenge to remove the malignancy from our institutions and declare peace or will we (soon) succumb to ever greater wars of destruction? The minority evil elites are no competition for the majority and never have been. It's that simple.

Have a happy, peaceful Christmas and many more if you choose.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2039.html>