

Ants and the Terrorist Scourge

I'm going to utilise the very apt analogy of colony ants to highlight the ease with which the world could cure its terrorism problem overnight.

It's summer where I live, the time when this ground species of colony ant extends its territory. It happens every year and though it took a little thinking to stem this natural tide of invasive ants without utilising toxic chemicals, I solved the problem and resort to the same highly efficient cure every season.

Ants extend their territory by first sending out scouts looking for resources (food) which the colony requires for survival, they report back to the nest in which the queen ant lives and breeds and while doing so leave a scent trail to follow. Numerous scouts report back but only those that have found good food sources are followed back out on their scent trails to the food and if the food is abundant like most western kitchens, they attempt to establish another colony on or in very close proximity to that source and so the minute ant succeeds in fulfilling nature's imperative, survival.

However, there are competing interests that also wish to secure their futures and survive, in this case, me, though ants do not threaten my survival yet, they are a pest with which I do not wish to continually contend.

The ants invade my space via my kitchen window following an invisible scent trail to and from the nest and if this invasive tide is dealt with immediately then no new colony would be established in my space.

I use boiling water to immediately dispense with the invaders in my kitchen but it requires a little more effort to eradicate this problem permanently without resorting to extreme measures, which would pose a risk to my very young children. While I did pour boiling water down my window sill to wipe out the scent trail, scouts kept returning via different avenues, the top of the window for instance, and that's when it became apparent that one needed to eliminate the nest from which they emerged. It was easy, as (visible) ants walk in line on invisible scent trails so I went outside and followed that line back to the nest, which I then dug up or exposed, poured kerosene on and ignited, goodbye problem! Now the point should not be lost, one is required to locate and eliminate the nest to eradicate the problem!

Today, numerous terrorist groups ravage various regions of the world and have established temporary colonies in some, Syria, Iraq, North Africa and Afghanistan/Pakistan. However, the vast majority of these groups emerge from One principal nest, WASHINGTON! It is no secret that the world was not bothered by a global terrorist scourge until the USA required a bogeyman threat with which to justify military expansion and create a viable excuse to wage perpetual war, of course for the principal reason of resource theft and territorial acquisition via installed compliant corrupt new puppet governments.

I need not waste space here highlighting the known fact that Osama bin Laden was a CIA asset and his family had very tight connections with the Bush family, simple research on the net verifies the fact. Bin Laden was required to create a universal scourge which Washington would utilise to illegally invade sovereign, resource rich but weak nations and also to declare perpetual war on the noun, terror! You see, had war been declared on an entity, state/nation or group, then that war would have soon ended in victory for the stronger force, however, the goal was “perpetual war” and so war would have to be declared on a non-entity or abstract, in this case a word, the noun ‘terror!’ That well thought out strategy allowed Washington to invade at any time anyone it accused and demonised in its CFR controlled media, of terrorist activity, and so that war would be never ending in theory, but to return to the ‘terrorist’ scourge and eliminating the nest.

It is no secret that ISIL/ISIS/Daesh, sprang out of a box overnight fully equipped, armed and trained, to take vast swathes of territory in sovereign states and to jeopardise the existence of legitimate governments, which of course would be demonised, by any means including LIES, and accused of terrorist activity, as was Iraq and many other nations that Washington wished to plunder, too easy.

Terrorist groups today, for the most part, are supplied, equipped and trained by the CIA, Brussels/NATO, Turkey and numerous Gulf State monarchies, all of which take orders from Washington. So quite plainly the infestation problem is easily cured by eliminating the nest, i.e., the interests that control Washington, and they are the financial elite and their corporate entities. All one need do is pour kero on the exposed nest and set it alight to be rid of the global terrorist problem, for good -- temporary colonies stand little chance without a queen ‘ant.’

Easy, isn’t it? However, if you would rather live with ants invading your house and causing continual grief, do nothing and the problem would be sure to get much worse.
