

Cyber War - The Reality that Anyone could Trigger a War between Superpowers

An interesting, though superficial, article appeared on Sputnik News recently. It reports that the USA and Russia will meet in Geneva to discuss the very real possibility that a third party could trigger a cyber war between superpowers, though the article goes to great pains to state that reality in muted terms -- though anyone with a functional brain, especially members of the 'deep hacker elite,' responsible for the so-called 'dark net' -- have been debating the issue for years with the same fervour and zealotry of superpowers. You see, as always it's a power game, however, the power resides TODAY with those entities that have the greater skills, as distinct from the traditional (antiquated) reality of which party has the biggest gun/military.

Indeed, a lone, skilled hacker could have triggered WWII some years back but fortunately, unlike the USA, highly skilled hackers do not rush in guns blazing, which mindless idiotic action only creates more problems, plain to see.

The hackers I refer to are geniuses, though highly specialised. And that fact is very fortunate for the world as there is no such thing as an evil genius, evil and brutality are characteristics of morons and inferior intellects.

The opposing camps in both spheres seem equally divided, notwithstanding unknown but clearly existent solo operators, however, the outcome or probability of war would of course hinge on which group or lone activist has the superior skill, as no-one controls anyone in the underground, as distinct from the mega-wealthy elite that control the pedestrian world.

Indeed, it is well known to both the 'above' and 'below' elites that the masses are easily manipulated and have a collective IQ in the minuses. So they are viewed simply as an expendable resource by the 'above' and a very sorry group by 'below' elite groups.

So today we have an arranged meeting by puppet politicians serving the interests of the surface financial elites attempting as always to save their skins, after all, the entire wealth of the world means nothing if you're dead or money/gold etc., becomes valueless overnight - I would add that the hackers I refer to are easily able to neutralise the value of money, precious metals and any other item of 'value' utilised in international exchange. However, for the same reasons as stated above, precipitating chaos and war, they resist the temptation and only freely take what they need without detection.

In effect, what I am saying is that the power structures of the world today have been irrevocably altered. The real battle for the world today is between two sets of elites though one clearly has the advantage. And pray to whichever man-created mythical God you choose, that one member of this powerful underground elite doesn't 'lose it' (power intoxicates) and decides to trigger Armageddon.

Now to the positive view, though I do not expect anyone in the moronic herd to see or apprehend the obvious, which is, this very tense and exceedingly critical situation can be avoided by simply holding known surface elites to account for all their heinous crimes and jailing everyone that serves them, which is all major political parties, those at the helm of mega-banks/financial institutions and all multi-national corporations. Failure in this respect leaves all the decisions and actions in the hands of known and unknown criminal and opposing sane minority elites, which cannot be relied upon indefinitely, as arguments about intervention are becoming more heated by the day, by both groups.

And yes, I know, it would be too much to ask/reveal to the moronic, enslaved, fear-ridden, over-titillated, nose-ringed masses that they are only bound by paper/ideological propaganda chains of fear and that they REMAIN the strongest social force in the world.

Now without being too cynical, the odds are stacked in favour of chaos and war and it's all your fault, you gutless, mindless, nose-ringed paralysed, morons! If you wish to restore your lost/forfeited liberties, freedoms and rights, then simply take them back and jail the KNOWN surface criminal elites, they are in CONSTANT dread that one day the masses will awaken to that simple REALITY.

Take note of the date of the following article linked below and begin to understand that the underground hacker elite is light years ahead of State groups, though Russia remains ahead of all other nations:
