

Global Nuclear Threat -- Dire!

The US and its western allies have unashamedly embarked on a transparent attack strategy to provoke Russia and China into retaliating, in order for the west to then say, 'we told you so, they were a threat all along!' Utter media fabricated bunk, though a good excuse for a provoked war.

Aware researches and commentators are watching while the US and its vassals increase their nuclear arsenals at frightening speed. Russia and China are also aware of this unprecedented build up. It is clear that lunacy has become the determining factor in western corridors of power. The fact is that western elites actually desire war and are hell bent on fomenting one as the global economy NOW faces total ruin, only kept 'alive' with massive, continuous, non-productive paper money printing, known euphemistically as 'Quantitative Easing' or QE, notwithstanding the fact that the global economy faces ruin as a direct result of this economically suicidal strategy, news/information of which has been withheld from the media-washed general population. However, some plain relatively easy research verifies everything stated above.

QE at best is a short term measure and when it fails to resurrect hollowed out economies, it has the reverse effect, it begins to silently devalue everything until economic implosion occurs, which is very soon, hence the need to engage in a devastating war -- war has always been the last resort of mega-wealthy global elites as it has always destroyed in order to rebuild, BUT traditional wars never posed a threat to the entire planet. So the lunatics in the west have convinced themselves they would be able to defeat their perceived (fabricated) enemies with 'minimal' destruction though that term is relative, the destruction would be horrific as there is no way to control a nuclear conflict EXCEPT not to launch one.

However, the elites imagine they would be safe in their shelters and are willing to take the ultimate, clearly insane, risk -- you see, if the global economy implodes all their ill-gotten wealth would INSTANTLY evaporate and that prospect, for money/power addicted psychopaths, is too horrible to entertain. So you/we see the west now engaged in continuous provocations and massive NUCLEAR preparations; however, both Russia and China have not taken the bait as the west's intentions are known and obvious to those following critical real-world events not media drivel and distractions.

Nonetheless, the west is becoming evermore desperate as it approaches economic implosion and because Russia and China have not taken the bait to date, and so the most probable extreme -- a false flag operation -- which is an orchestrated attack of some kind used to blame the victim/perceived enemy, is fast becoming reality; either that or the ultimate provocation in the form of an attack based on some feeble, transparent excuse.

It is pointless to appeal to the media harnessed, uninformed western masses, as they live in total enslavement and delusion. There is only one alternative when faced with a prospect of this nature and that is to launch a pre-emptive strike, as insane as that sounds. However, when it becomes obvious the west is hell bent on their plan no other alternative presents itself -- Putin, more than Xi, has implored European leaders and the US to cease their provocations but to no avail, and so no other 'solution' is available, such is the critical nature of the current situation.

The East must strike BEFORE the western build-up compromises their positions to the extent they would either be forced to capitulate or engage in a world terminating nuclear conflict, and that is precisely what western lunatics are hoping for!

So it's been nice knowing you, as clearly the world has run out of options. I cannot envisage either China or Russia allowing the lunatic, war mongering west to vanquish them without a fight. Indeed, the familiar war cry of "freedom or death" will become the determining REALITY.
