

Pre-emptive Oz Election Results

by justin Wednesday, Jun 29 2016, 9:52pm

international / prose / post

After the majors receive the shock they deserve from a disillusioned, IGNORED public tired of the LIES, meaningless babble, scare campaigns, empty slogans and FAKE financial figures based on "future projects," wishful thinking in other words -- as if in this extremely unstable world, created by American illegal interventionism and trade wars -- anyone could predict financial outcomes; however, one thing is clear, Shorten must, for the good of the party, GO! Not due to his inability or lack of negotiating and organising skills but simply because he has no presence or leadership bearing and would never be able to gain the support of the majority of Australians.

Furthermore, Labor is not short on likely leaders with PRESENCE and BEARING, Brendan O'Connor and Tanya Plibersek spring to mind, as Burke and Bowen fade out of the picture with Shorten, however, the three personality failures I refer to should be utilised appropriately by the party, they can't help the way they appear -- high school boys!

Turnbull, however, would receive little joy as his 'trickle down economics' will fail here as it failed in the UK and America, but what does that matter, as the notoriously lying/deceptive Libs attempt to fudge their way through disaster after disaster, employing 'blame game' infantile tactics as usual. The 'victorious' Libs would face a Senate more hostile than before Turnbull changed the rules, hoping that would put an end to minor parties -- not so, as the people would always vote for real representatives with INTEGRITY, you can choke on your stupid, transparent bag of facile tricks, Turnbull!

Now Australia, consider that the current Liberal government has been in power for almost three years and what have they really ACHIEVED? Zilch as far as the population is concerned, but much if you're a member of the corporate/banker elite -- the interests Libs ALWAYS serve while deceiving the Oz public. But it's all coming to an end/head as world events clearly indicate, the global masses have had enough of the bullshitting, deceptive status quo of unrepresentative elite rule, plain to see!

Turnbull will choke on his lies, especially how 'he' will safeguard Australia with "stability and his airy-fairy, unsubstantiated "plan," as that is all it is! However, it will be too late for Australians trapped in this absurd lesser evil choice between two owned parties. The paradigm MUST change if REAL progress is to be made and the sooner people become aware of the fact the sooner Oz would gird its loins and rely on its untapped talent and resourcefulness to survive in a soon to become chaotic world. Australia MUST protect its manufacturing base/sector, there's no two-ways about it, Oz must once again rely on itself not offshoring and outsourcing.

A major party win would assist in this revolutionary process as neither party is self-reliant, both serve and are controlled by elite corporate and other transnational interests (TPP) that could care less about the public, again PLAIN TO SEE!

So the result of this, hopefully the last election of its kind before Oz is FORCED to undergo a very necessary r/evolution, is not all bad, the public must be woken to REALITY and become completely immune to the tired old tricks of the status quo. Now, you have been warned, Australia. Meanwhile the aware few will do as we have always done, enjoying the predictable show and ASSISTING those that offer the most VIABLE alternatives.

Enjoy the meaningless elections, blind Aussie fuck's -- fortunately for Australia your species is fast approaching extinction. This SOVEREIGN nation has a very bright future with the right people leading it.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2281.html>