

The BIG Loser -- Disconnected elitist, Malcolm Turnbull

by darcy Saturday, Jul 2 2016, 11:57pm

international / prose / post

Regardless of the final outcome it is now plain that the REAL loser is Turnbull, who displayed the utmost arrogance falsely imagining -- and led by the nose by antiquated thinking, formula-driven consultants/strategists, which to a person, should all be unceremoniously sacked -- that he would coast home. Turnbull's born-to-rule arrogance extended to him making the astonishing statement to the public that he would easily be victorious, a truly divorced from reality ASSUMPTION, as today's post-election REALITY dictates.

On the other hand Shorten, who has the presence and bearing of a nondescript vapour (fart), blitzed them; coming from nowhere to essentially a photo-finish, due largely to Turnbull's incompetence, lack of character, and allowing himself to be captured by the ill-advice of a bunch of highly paid, socially UNAWARE advisors, which had Turnbull living in Alice's wonderland.

Indeed, Turnbull couldn't have done it any worse than he did and he deserves everything he gets. He displayed absolutely no leadership skills or character, probably due to his own very distinct narcissistic, pathological, personality flaw -- 'NPD.' However, reality always wins the day, not American-style, empty of substance, media campaigns, are you reading this, Mr Murdoch and others?

Clearly the influence of media plutocrats and the unrepresentative corporate/banker business elite is waning though not entirely dead, as it no-doubt will be in the very near future. The public is more politically aware today than at any other time in modern history BUT the insular, disconnected conservatives, by nature, are ALWAYS the last to apprehend dynamic social realities and that disconnect just cost Turnbull his much desired throne as born-to-rule, Emperor of Australia; Turnbull will go down in Australian political history as one of the most incompetent and hopeless leaders we have had, no question. What a complete and thorough loser AND political dunce! There is absolutely no way after this disastrous election that Turnbull could successfully lead his party, notwithstanding the fact that the Liberals never tolerate a loser for long.

As for Shorten, he did well and credit goes to him, however, a REAL LEADER with presence and BEARING could have snatched the prize, of course assisted by Shorten's organising and negotiating skills as number TWO in Party leadership; Shorten should drop HIS dream of becoming PM and become one of Australia's most noted political players, the number two man in propelling a real leader with presence, to power; but again, narcissism and a fanciful dream to become PM prevents that outcome, pity, as structurally cumbersome Labor is making their run much more difficult.

Both majors should learn from the huge percentage swing away from the adversarial, two major party antiquated paradigm, isn't that right, Rupert? The days of plutocrats/shadow government are numbered, the entire WORLD says so!

As for our editorial team we not only predicted this outcome but gave a full, stage-by-stage analytical description of why this outcome would materialise, it wasn't difficult, you dunce, gutless, editorially-captured, disgraceful, mainstream journos -- shame on you for not having the guts to penetrate below the facile 'newstainment,' salad dressing surface. It is YOU that have allowed Australia to be ruined by successive sellout governments and feeble leadership. Double shame on you all! To remind you, REAL journalists are the guard dogs of a healthy DEMOCRACY and a FREE progressive society, which does not tolerate white-collar crime, backroom shadow rule or unrepresentative, sellout leadership, as has been the case in Australia since Gough Whitlam was deposed by nefarious FOREIGN forces. Wake up and DO YOUR JOB, you timid, mortgage-anxious, creeps!

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2284.html>