

“Owned”

by karloz Monday, Nov 7 2016, 7:44pm

international / prose / post

The hacker term “owned” is taken to mean that a ‘system’ has been completely compromised, hijacked and that total control of that system is now in the hands of the hacker/intruder without the knowledge of the original owner. Elite hackers do not make their presence known, they remain invisible and utilise the captured system in various ways.

If we apply the method to the social sphere, we realise that the current social system has been hijacked by shadowy elite interests and that these unrepresentative, minority interests essentially control the game/society. They own the mass media, judiciary and most other critical government institutions, including the military, regulatory (police) and intelligence agencies etc, plain to see in all western nations.

Such is the level of penetration that they even own the right to print money -- The (global) Reserve Banking Cartel, with headquarters in New York controls the global economy via supply, these interests have almost completely captured all the governments of the western world; and of course they own and run the electoral process in every nation they dominate. In almost all instances political leaders of the two major adversarial political parties are owned prior to any election thereby ensuring that the status quo, serving elite interests, always prevails regardless of which candidate/puppet gains office -- remember the office itself has already been captured. So the electoral process is a SHAM, a farce, a show/charade presented to the public in order to maintain the illusion that the people continue to influence the system -- well, CLEARLY the masses own and influence NOTHING of importance, in fact the people are captured slaves reinforcing the chains that bind them.

The fascinating aspect of this obvious game is that most people are aware of the fix and that the game is rigged YET they, the masses, continue to subscribe to a system which they know is thoroughly corrupt. The masses fail to act outside the corrupt system which of course ENSURES its continuation, much to the delight of the shadowy interests that OWN the game! Proof in point is the current American presidential election, an obvious fix in progress, however, Americans remain enthralled/captured by the electoral charade and continue to participate/vote. To say this behaviour defies reason is putting it mildly, it is downright pathological behaviour, the reasons for which are too broad to outline in this short paper though numerous posts to this site have covered the most important details, which are also freely available in the public domain.

Rather than repeat what is widely known or engage in more circular analysis I would question the players/slaves, why do YOU persist in playing a rigged game as it is obvious there is no way to win on a crooked table. It becomes as plain as day that an owned corrupted system CANNOT be changed from within as every tool available is already controlled and owned by the forces one wishes to overthrow.

Until such time that people realise that continuing to subscribe or play on a rigged table is utterly FUTILE the status quo will remain unaffected. Clearly, the ONLY way to effect REAL CHANGE is to approach the problem from outside the constructed, enslaving ‘box;’ which means NOT participating in any owned game but to participate in a game designed to eliminate the former game by re-constructing the table, or restoring it (democracy) to its ORIGINAL design.

The people are ABLE to exercise their prerogatives and take the initiative and effect REAL change -- so my question is, why the circular, counterproductive participation in what is KNOWN to be a FRAUDULENT, self-defeating activity?

Given that today most people are aware of the fix, I am fucked if I know why they continue to participate in a self-defeating process when they should approach it laterally from OUTSIDE and eliminate the problem.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2402.html>