

The Elite Status Quo

by jude Wednesday, Nov 16 2016, 12:51am

international / prose / post

Dynastic elite families have ruled the world since the time of the Pharaohs, so it's no surprise they rule the world today. However, history informs us time and again that when the "let them eat cake," elites lose touch or apply harsh living pressures on their enslaved subjects, the slaves revolt and take their revenge on their elite rulers.

Indeed, elites do rule today though they rule from the shadows via expendable proxies; they have learned not to expose their necks to the chopping block and so we have rule by political and other proxies throughout the western world. Proxies serve a very useful purpose, they are totally expendable and take all the 'heat,' therefore elite servants have a lot to lose, including their lives, which makes them very compliant to elite dictates, as is evident in ALL captured western societies.

Elites are secure in their world if they understand what is tolerable and intolerable for the masses. In today's world where no real shortages exist, money included, it benefits elites to apportion some of the wealth they own and control to their subjects in order to keep them compliant and manageable. However, if elites lose touch or they become intoxicated/deluded with their own power they begin to apply more and more pressure on their subjects to increase their own wealth at the expense of everyone else, which group begins to suffer hardship and deprivation until they wake to the fact that things are not going to improve without direct intervention, which process is in full swing today in the western world.

A very obvious case in point is the election of Trump to the office of president. This man is an appalling character as his mouth verifies yet people were willing to ignore all his character flaws because he promised REAL CHANGE and the hope that he could improve the lives of suffering people in the USA. I repeat, the ONLY reason he was installed as president by the enslaved disposable masses is simply due to the fact that he offered the oppressed, disillusioned, struggling masses a CHANGE in the form of rejecting established elite rule.

So the desperate masses, probably for the last time, elected a narcissistic, bombastic 'representative' to office, notwithstanding that Trump is a big improvement on the other candidate, who the world knew to be a despicable war mongering liar and a thoroughly dishonest fraud serving elite interests OPENLY, a situation anathema to the elite.

Nevertheless, the elite imagined they could do it again via their mass media misinformation apparatuses, and so almost in lockstep throughout the western world the masses were subjected to the most dishonest, partial, media saturated bombardment of LIES and extreme propaganda that Hillary Clinton had the presidency in the bag -- well, did she?

The elites, known for their arrogance, imagined they were infallible (a symptom of their current malaise) after all, overt LIES worked in destroying Yugoslavia, Iraq, Libya, Afghanistan, Syria, Yemen and a host of other weaker nations. You could hardly blame the elite for thinking they couldn't fail - but fail they did, stupendously. The shock was felt more in the shadowy halls of REAL power than it was by captured media lackeys, journalists and political commentators - today they all have egg on their faces which will stain for quite some time. But it proved that the elite owned media is no longer capable of managing the people and that is a critical development, as the elite owned mass media is the strongest weapon in the elite arsenal.

It is hoped that western journalists are able to trace the source of this orchestrated failed ruse and begin to follow traditional investigative methods to determine the truth. In fact doing so now and exposing elite think-tank, the CFR would be a great story indeed.

Now faced with the growing social awareness of their slaves, have the elites learned anything? Of course not, they have predictably begun to offer Trump 'incentives' to play ball with established ruling interests and to allow the existing Status Quo to continue on its dastardly suicidal course. But will the slaves and oppressed wear a Trump sell-out, I think not, as it is clear that not since the civil war has America been so divided, and Trump is sitting like the proverbial duck to face the consequences from either the people or from malevolent elite forces if he refuses to co-operate and sell-out the America people yet AGAIN.

The second development worthy of note is that the people have realised that things are not right with the 'order' of things, which would be emphasised if Trump were to sell-out. The people would be forced to face an historical reality that only DIRECT REMEDIAL ACTION CREATES REAL CHANGE; and as we know, the American people traditionally are not shy about such matters, as their history indicates, notwithstanding the FACT that elites are out-numbered by billions to one.

So I leave the evil elites to reap the poison crop they have sown and I leave the enslaved, abused people to remedy the situation directly - there are no real democracies in the western world today. If America moves to free itself, the WORLD would follow suit; truly, these are very interesting times. But we shall see.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2416.html>