

Noreply

by zed Friday, Nov 18 2016, 11:58pm international / poetry / post was it the tinkle of tree-ice crystals, the whisper of the night, or the slow hum of a new summer warmth that drew me closer?

it seemed that it all crept up too slow to be noticed but now it overwhelms, the innate attraction at the centre of being it was as if i had lost something precious and became obsessed with its recovery -- strange and seemingly unrelated occurrences became beckoning calls, signs a language that bypasses conscious discrimination is effective and so the message was delivered without my knowledge yet with the clearest meaning, untainted by thought restored, it has a secret which i cannot betray as no other thing is capable of receiving a message that is target specific, unintelligible to all but one; and so living with this knowledge becomes an easy burden, as there is nothing to talk or write about gliding ibis pass overhead, fruit bats fly from the other direction to their roosting trees; it's timely, as the sun slips below the horizon, i hear it again

do not feel deprived or short-changed by this, your message has already been delivered -- read it!