

Neither

by zed Sunday, Nov 27 2016, 10:35am international / poetry / post a fool that persists in folly does not become wise, obsessed perhaps but never wise

yet i persist in attempting dialogues with the illiterate, blind and deaf.

are somnambulists capable of reason? clearly not, but they are capable of fantastic dreams and other un-realities like imagining freedom while in chains or mistaking the real for an illusion tho in my own world i vainly attempt to interrupt ur tendency to depart; surely u'd think i would have learned never to clutch at permanence in a transitory world -- "stay," i say in a world populated with dreamwalkers impelled to follow a path which leads nowhere shadows appear and disappear on my walls they pass, bodies hiding from view coming and going from/to nowhere i draw the curtains and eliminate the distraction as u dress; making love to a dreamer is yet another folly like chasing myself running from uncertainty i watch u going thru automatic motions dressing, i prefer u naked but life is saturated with unfulfilled desires -- Buddhism's appeal increases daily each confrontation with reality tends to awaken i plead for u to stay as tho my life depended on it but u ignore my entreaties tho u always appear when it suits you so i abandon my attempts to persuade the keyboard clicks frantically behind me, it's my monkey typing Shakespeare but when i inspect the page only the word banana appears endlessly -- however, my monkey is determined, it took him years to master,

'banana'

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2423.html>