Snow in the Tropics

by jake and joan Monday, Apr 24 2017, 10:13am international / poetry / post

Ι

summer approaches in the northern hemisphere yet souls freeze white hot heads are responsible for the cold

i am seized by a sudden urge to return to Capricornia to soak in the sun one last time i have a sheep dog called 'pres' he barks and manoeuvres, the sheep huddle, uncertain then go where the dog herds them -a faithful servant, i have trained him well i have heard it said, 'when will they ever learn?' how many wars must be fought before we wake up dead?

ΙΙ

III

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2625.html