

Pre-emption is a Certainty -- WWII here We Come!

by jude Friday, Apr 28 2017, 7:53pm

international / prose / post

Let's assess some facts and realities and steer clear of all the inaccurate verbiage and twaddle of mainstream and alternative media journos that are mostly in love with their own voices, while at the same time displaying a morbid fear of addressing some obvious hard facts.

Here's what we know without doubt, the American deep state, comprising of Pentagon hawks, self-interested intel/regulatory agencies, lunatic Zionist neocon ideologues and the corporate element that profits from this group, are the most powerful force in Washington, perhaps the western world. With some minor superficial differences, they ALL fervently agree on one thing and that is American hegemony using military force. The past two decades (history) verifies as much.

So we are confronted in no uncertain terms with the first searing reality, America is hell bent on world domination and resorts to brute force/violence to realise same -- established.

Now enter the rest of the world. Of course the world is pluralistic by nature and very diverse in views/cultures which produces varied realities, though the USA since WWII has done a remarkable job exporting its cultural ideology to every western nation, most of which are now obsequious US vassals. However, in nations that have a long history, American views are anathema, they are adolescent, impulsive and generally destructive for majorities and independent nations. In other words, other powerful nations are not about to heel to American demands of servility. 'Pax-Americana' is symptomatic of deluded psychopathic thinking as this world is too pluralistic for one nation to assume global rule, no proof of the obvious required.

However, the American deep state is not concerned with reality or sanity, they are pathologically obsessed with a delusional dream, as they imagine they are God's chosen, exceptional, which erroneous belief, enables treating others/foreigners as expendable or to be exploited.

So without labouring what is easily established for oneself, what are we viewing in international terms? To refresh, one nation seeks to dominate all nations and uses force to achieve its aims.

We know that other powerful nations will not have a bar of it; therefore, conflict is the result, as is occurring as I write.

Now, clearly, threatened nations would not stand by and allow themselves to be vanquished, so these powerful nations are preparing for war, and they have very good reason to do so -- survival.

The bully nation is not about to alter its policies regardless of a figurehead president, as is evident, it would use all available means to realise its now known nefarious, psychopathic agenda/goal.

To conclude succinctly, when nations are roughly evenly matched, alliances considered, the only recourse is the element of surprise, every first year military cadet learns these tactics, which today mean a pre-emptive nuclear strike, either defensive, from threatened nations, or offensive, from warring nations. Either way the masses are not going to hear about it on the 'news'. It will be over almost as soon as it starts.

The few that survive on the surface may then appreciate the fact that when they were a global majority they could have prevented mad men and women destroying civilisation and most of the planet.

All the above assessments are based on plain facts confronting the world today, NOW!

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2633.html>