

West London Fire -- Theresa May's Transparent Political Posturing

by reg Friday, Jun 16 2017, 8:49am

international / prose / post

The corporatist elite are doing it tough in the UK; their conservative political puppets, particularly servile and disconnected Theresa May, have been caught out faking it in the most horrid circumstances, as has the local mass media. First in relation to staged terrorist attacks, which were meant to give May a larger parliamentary majority and now with her insensitive posturing over the west London fire.

Thirty (30) people have perished to date [79, updated] in a block that was built with unsafe, extremely hazardous materials known to easily combust, a report was given to the local conservative council and other authorities regarding the risk of using these materials in 2013 and nothing was done, after all, conservatives are there to serve large corporate and other business interests and to hell with the risk to battling citizens, there is more money to be made using cheap and dangerous materials than safe, as we all know. This is not a insular "let them eat cake" mentality, it's an abhorrent, 'let them die,' mentality!

And so, after Ms May was deservedly sledged by the independent media about her obvious politically opportunistic speech regarding the staged 'terrorist' attacks days before the election, her elite masters, acutely aware of damaged political goods, trotted her out to make her appear as though she really has a heart and is human after all, though plainly she is an elitist robot.

Now note the way the mass media is covering the west London fire moderately, as almost fatalistic or an 'accidents do happen' approach, and contrast it to the sensationalist, salacious and hysterical manner in which they covered the terrorist attacks in which only a fraction of the people died compared to the fire deaths; CLEARLY the media should be screaming for the heads of the culpable - - corrupt and servile politicians and real estate developers -- to be held to account for the totally AVOIDABLE fire tragedy. Indeed, if the media needs to scream about anything and demand blood then it is now; however, the elite-owned mass media must protect its investment in puppet conservative politicians and so a tame and moderate tone in reporting, though one BBC radio journalist was almost ranting about the fact that this tragedy was entirely avoidable, a correct assessment in view of the 2013 report.

You see, fellow citizens, this fire does not fit neatly into the elite conservative agenda, which is more concerned with creating and maintaining an oppressed slave labour force, implementing internet censorship and creating a police state, than the welfare of the community.

An INQUEST into the fire, which would involve citizens is the only way that justice could be served, though we already know that conservative puppet politicians would avoid an inquest like the plague, as it would expose them as the servile traitorous scum that they are, and I do not apologise for the harsh language, if the shoe fits ...!

Mindless and clearly callous Theresa May belatedly saw relatives and victims of the fire to offer personal consolation and justice, and was severely criticised for her delayed response, which may be attributed to her media and political consultants advising her to avoid immediate direct contact, however, as her behaviour prior to the elections became transparent so too was her fake planned gesture and political posturing in West London. If Theresa May is damaged goods after the election she is now politically TOXIC and the elite's mass media is not far behind; if anything, the mass media should be screaming for explanations and publishing all the compromising reports advising CONSERVATIVE councils of unsafe materials.

There is a very sinister, now exposed, theme underlying the way the fire and 'terrorist' attacks are presented to the people and the people sense it, though specifics have not yet been revealed, though the odour of unrepresentative fake government and fraud can be detected from Australia.

Clearly an INQUEST into the tragic fire is the only way of arriving at justice and holding the culpable to account, a standard 'official' inquiry would be fraught with the usual corruption and deception, and the people of the UK most assuredly, have had enough!

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2714.html>