

Dark Matter and Dark States

by reg Monday, Aug 14 2017, 2:16am

international / prose / post

It is said by astrophysicists that over 90% of all matter in our universe consists of invisible dark matter, the same ratio applies to the non-representative rulers of western States, in other words what we see in government is less than 5% of the REALITY of our governance.

Western 'dark states,' a far more preferable term than deep state, rule all western nations, yet the players remain unaccountable as they install and use expendable puppet politicians to do their dirty work and take the flak/fall if any scandal/issue arises -- while the largely invisible real rulers, bankers, media moguls and powerful corporate executives, remain safe manipulating outcomes behind the scenes.

The actions of dark state players remain largely invisible, there's no need for a spotlight as they own all politicians and DICTATE important policy for their puppets to carry out. If any politician fails to comply or defer to the dark state they are either ignored and support withdrawn or dispatched via fabricated/orchestrated 'scandals' if they have a high profile -- national leaders, for example -- which media fictions and distortions, the mass media arm of the dark state disseminates at saturation levels until the targeted politician is thoroughly disgraced or removed from office, as there are no shortages of lackeys in politics all too willing to take office and serve the dark state.

There is absolutely no secret reason why politicians lie through their teeth to the people and then backflip and serve a nefarious -- they are responsible for ALL wars -- unrepresentative minority elite. The extraordinary aspect of this reality is that the lied-to masses are easily able to see that they are treated as dupes and never represented, in fact, today they are now socially oppressed/repressed. So what do we have, in reality, democracy? Not a chance, those that rule are oligarchs and plutocrats, they detest democracy as they imagine they are born to rule over the moronic herd, be aware that mass murderer, Henry Kissinger once stated, to paraphrase, 'the direction nations take is far too important a matter to be left to the people,' and so goodbye democracy and hello fascism. Populations are left with dark state rule whether they like it or not usually via a charade of democracy populated with unrepresentative duplicitous politicians.

Over the past decades of elite minority, unrepresentative rule, populations everywhere should have become aware that something is 'not quite right' with government, excuse the understatement. In fact, the majority around the globe are aware that politicians are no better than used car salesmen or lawyers, the absolute bottom of the integrity scale in western societies.

So one way or another the status quo is bound to change; it could happen with increased social awareness of the dark nefarious forces or by circumstantial (forced) revolt of restive populations that have had enough maltreatment and are ready to ignite over the slightest spark, such is their hardships and pain.

Aware social commentators and political analysts, place your bets, because one thing is certain, existing ruling structures/processes are bound to change, perhaps for the good, but I doubt that, as reform of criminal states and ruling systems should have occurred decades past, so change today and in the future is bound to be extremely explosive.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2818.html>