

The System is Flawed Beyond Repair -- a NEW Paradigm is the Only Sane and Practical Solution

All one need do to understand the abysmal state of world and local affairs is to look at the mass media news of late, view it objectively and do not allow yourself to be swept away with its tailored emotive triggers and you would see it for what it really is transmitting, an extreme pathological condition, which supports not the people's or nation's interests but the insanity of shadow governments and military weapons manufacturers -- CORPORATIONS that would see the world devastated by war, perhaps nuclear, in order to turn a profit. Such is the manic insanity of it ALL today!

For instance, the latest 'news' (sales propaganda) is that the USA would soon deploy Lockheed Martin's various versions of the F-35 strike fighter, as the original was/is a supreme failure and the most blown-out (costly) FAILED fighter jet ever designed -- much to Lockheed Martin's financial joy as guess who is footing the bill? Nevertheless, Lockheed Martin MUST sell these lemons to stupid subservient US allies for outrageous blowout prices, as Lockheed Martin would almost go bankrupt if it doesn't, so what's the latest 'news?' Not dialogue and sanity regarding North Korea but preparing populations for war, as if war is inevitable, BUT 'inevitability' is created by, in this instance, Lockheed Martin and its other partner in crime and deception, the western mass media. Here's the actual story, which subtext transmits more than was obviously intended, however, it is imperative that you read the above embedded link from Vanity Fair first in order to gain perspective, it's the most brutally accurate account of Lockheed Martin's supreme con and failed jet fighter, the F-35.

Here's the sell, make no mistake, as war with North Korea is easily avoidable, only one of the three world superpowers is pitching for war, have a guess?

The US just gave North Korea a new threat to worry about -- F-35 stealth jets

by (disgraceful, bought journalist) Alex Lockie

As North Korea grows increasingly bold by threatening US territories and flying missiles over Japan, the US has broke out for the first time its most advanced fighter, the F-35.

In a trilateral show of force with South Korean and Japanese fighter jets, the US responded to North Korea's recent provocations with its usual flight of B-1 strategic bombers, but this time it added US Marine Corps F-35Bs.

The US frequently flies the high-endurance, high-capacity B-1 with Japan and South Korea's fighter jets nearby, but the addition of the F-35 sends a message: While North Korea's military capability is growing, so is the US's.

"North Korea's actions are a threat to our allies, partners and homeland, and their destabilizing actions will be met accordingly," Gen. Terrence J. O'Shaughnessy, the commander of the US Pacific Air Forces, said in a statement. “Our forward-deployed force will be the first to the fight, ready to deliver a lethal response at a moment’s notice if our nation calls.”

The F-35B in the hands of US Marine aviators has excellent stealth characteristics that means North Korea won’t even know if the planes are overhead. Furthermore, the jets can takeoff almost vertically and land on a dime, making them perfect for quick, surprise strikes.

With advanced radars and sensors, F-35s can alert legacy jets used by Japan and South Korea to threats on the ground and in the air, potentially increasing their efficacy against already overmatched North Korean forces.

Soon, South Korea will get F-35As, the Air Force version of the jet meant to takeoff from runways, and Japan will load its fearsome Izumo-class aircraft carriers with F-35Bs.

And while North Korea grows its nuclear threat, the US is preparing a new block of software that will enable the F-35 to carry tactical nuclear weapons, matching the secrecy and potency of any offensive capability North Korea could dream of.

The US built the F-35 to penetrate the most heavily guarded airspaces on earth and to fool the most advanced anti-aircraft systems for decades to come. But the F-35, built to counter superpowers like China and Russia, handily overpowers anything North Korea can throw at it.

North Korea won’t stop its military provocations towards its neighbours and the US’s allies, but with the horrifying possibility that F-35s are lurking overhead, don’t expect North Korea to kill anything more than fish with its missile forces.

Now compare the above story to the embedded Vanity Fair article, what a pathetic joke! I have encountered second hand car salesmen that are more subtle, though Lockheed Martin would no doubt love it, such is their relationship with the western mass media.

However, the critical issue is the system under which we all live, do you think it’s time for a change, you’d better believe it! The prevailing paradigm/status quo is rotten to the core and is clearly not in anyone’s interest to support. So what are YOU going to do about REAL change?

Unplugging from the influence of the extremely deceptive western mass media and linking this article to everyone you know is a very good start. Believe nothing you see, hear or read on the mass media, it clearly lacks ALL integrity and only supports the interests of mass murdering elite Corporations, which rule the USA and its allied (vassal) states, including Australia.
