Prelude for an orchestrated 'terrorist' (inside job) event

It would appear that western populations are being primed for another major (9/11 type) 'terrorist' event. The Australian mass media is running stories, courtesy of the New York CFR, of navy seal team 6 killing Bin Laden (old news) and his adolescent son as the new leader of al-Qaeda. Though Hamza Bin Laden, is a kid, but what does that matter in a land run on make believe?

Osama Bin Laden as most informed political analysts are aware was a CIA asset who died of renal failure in Pakistan years before the Americans claim to have killed him, this knowledge was casually furnished to the world in an interview by former Pakistani president Benazir Bhutto -- she ought to know -- Bhutto was subsequently shot dead soon after by the Pakistani ISI under instructions from the CIA which nefarious organisation had worked with the ISI during and since successfully ousting Russia from Afghanistan. The ties between the two organisations are very strong indeed.

This latest, unrelated to current trends/affairs, (propaganda) 'news' would appear amusing except for the fact that America is losing its grip on the western world, a situation greatly assisted by Kim Jong-un who has made an international laughing stock of the world's sole 'hyperpower,' what a laugh.

The US navy has recently become notorious for colliding with extremely large, slow moving merchant vessels, which a blind man on a wind-jammer could see. Now combine those ineptitudes with the failed F-35 strike fighter, which costs $billions and is threatening to bankrupt Lockheed Martin if prospective purchasers cancel orders. Now add a nincompoop president who hasn't a clue about anything political and is only capable of looking in the mirror, barking threats and tweeting, for Christ's sake, and the situation is grim for America, did I mention that China and Russia have struck deals with other nations to trade away from the US dollar and make the trading Yuan convertible to gold, Wall Street's and the Feds worst nightmare and indeed another 9/11 event looks more possible than ever. The operative word describing Washington now is DESPERATION, as everything is unravelling before the unrepresentative shadow government's eyes.

Readers would note that a recent UN resolution over increased sanctions on NK, requires involved nations to enter into negotiations with NK to resolve this needless conflict peacefully, something America is loath to do, simply because it lacks diplomatic skills and is afraid that outcomes may not suit its plans and criminal, hegemonic interests. This is what Trump's national security advisor, General HR McMaster stated to an aware public regarding NK, "we've been kicking the can down the road, and we're out of the road," a typically vague and unsuitable American metaphor as it means absolutely NOTHING, though it is suitable for an easily beguiled nation that has already been successfully fed, 'there is light at the end of the tunnel,' MEANINGLESS, and 'moving forward,' a relative statement without details and details are never supplied because mindless oafs are happy to invest THEIR interpretations and expectations into abstractions. However, it is worth noting what this 'can kicking' attempts to sell a gullible public.

Clearly, as the Trump admin has never entered into any constructive discussions or negotiations with NK, the only 'can' being kicked is the backsides of the American public. Barking threats are not discussions particularly when NK has the US over a strategic barrel, furthermore, NK is desperate for talks as all this drama clearly indicates so why not talk and attempt to fulfil the UN resolution, which resolutions America delights in breaking if its track record is taken into account (Libya).

So we KNOW the Trump admin has never entered into any constructive negotiations and discussions with NK, Trump himself has been barking THREATS like a mad dog, not one constructive word; Nikki Haley -- UN Ambassador -- also pushes a similar line, stating that NK is "begging for war," among all the other threatening hot air issuing from Washington in relation to NK -- all of which mindless static has PROVEN to be counter-productive, good work Trump and his fellow imbeciles; how do we look, is our image taking a pounding? You bet it is, doodles

The result is of course a severe loss of face and status in the international community, which megalomaniac America cannot tolerate, the FACT is, as also stated recently by ousted Steve Bannon, "there is no military solution for NK," Bannon added, "they got us." But why take it personally it's a diplomatic and political matter, but to continue?

On second thoughts I have better things to do than try to communicate with morons, however, I would leave you with the very distinct possibility of another 9/11 event to save the day, an orchestrated event which played well would "make America great again," and serve to distract from the current debacle -- LOL!

Now if this anticipated event transpires and you or friends die, consider what the deep state really thinks of you, EXPENDABLE sheep. Bye, I have a can to kick!
