

Russia is Hurting Big Time

by dusan Friday, Oct 13 2017, 3:12am

international / prose / post

The news never covers what years of imposed sanctions, based primarily on fabricated charges and distortions, have done to the Russian economy, which was always vulnerable to this type of attack. The Russian economy is not broad, as it's largely based on energy supplies to Europe and former satellites and so if sanctions on its main source of income hit hard, then the same collapse that affected the Soviet Union would affect Russia today.

I am astounded by the lack of 'news' coverage in this regard as it is known that Russia has been constantly dipping into its emergency funds to survive crippling sanctions, however, as is clear this cannot last, but Russia has done nothing practically to oppose these tactical sanctions imposed primarily by the US and its servile western puppets.

It is also remarkable that it is not plainly stated that illegitimate sanctions on any country are actually a declaration of war, based on the ancient 'starve them out' military tactic/principle, which has proven effective throughout ancient and modern history. Russia's finite and ravaged emergency fund is diminishing so fast the world may soon see the economic collapse of Russia, as it occurred in the Soviet Union, suddenly. Russia is in big trouble though loath to publicise the fact and lend more support to this type of warfare, however, enemy western interests are acutely aware of the fact, and pat each other on the back for deploying a crippling successful economic attack on Russia, which nation and leadership will soon have to face reality. If crippling sanctions are not lifted soon, the Russian economy and Putin are kaput.

Now you would think that Putin, who prides himself as intelligent, has a plan or is able to retaliate in some fashion, but true to his compliant and gutless form he avoids the subject like the plague, always distracting the Russian people and his western supporters away from unpleasant realities. Clearly not a very wise manoeuvre as now his head is on the line. China has been assisting Russia but has its own problems with America to contend with, so its support is limited though appreciated.

It should be clearly understood by all national leaders and peoples that sanctions are in effect a declaration of war, and targeted nations have a right to defend themselves and retaliate in any way they see fit. However, Putin has clearly avoided these moves which could have been easily realised in Syria against the US, as America's presence and participation in that conflict is ENTIRELY illegal, but Putin being the supreme coward that he is has refrained from attacking an illegal foreign force/participant, hence Putin's stupid stop-start war in Syria where he had a huge advantage but allowed illegally occupying nations and their fighting proxy forces to regroup against Russia's and Syria's military.

Some would say that Putin's behaviour in the circumstances lacked reason, as Russia was on the brink of victory after its astounding surprise and devastatingly accurate attack successes, which no-one was prepared for, however, it was Putin that stalled NOT HIS MILITARY, who knew better than to allow enemy forces to regroup and re-arm and fight another day.

And so Russia's impending demise is sure, as its leader has clearly failed his country and many allied nations on so many fronts, he should be shot as there is no rational explanation for his behaviour except that he is in the pocket of the global elite.

When, not if, Russia collapses, we shall know the truth about Putin, if he tellingly escapes to the west which is predicted, or faces the wrath of the Russian people and military (unlikely) as what is the point of $billions in corruption money if you can't spend it, all doubt would be removed as to Putin's integrity.

However, Putin's life in either case would not be worth a sheckle, though it would be cold comfort to Russia and its people.

If you value your life and future Mr Putin, then attack your enemy without restraint, perhaps your LAST opportunity to do so legitimately would very soon arise on the Korean peninsular, as you are no doubt fully aware. However, our money is on your KNOWN cowardice, Mr Putin, you gutless piece of shit! Leopards and cowards do not, cannot, change their spots.

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2934.html>