

America the Unfortunate

by james Friday, Oct 13 2017, 11:57pm

international / prose / post

Average Americans are suffering from lunatic leadership which is noted by its insane rhetoric and provocations as begging for war. The latest unforgivable debacle is Trump's trashing of the Iran nuclear accord, which would allow Iran to develop nuclear weapons in response to the insanity of the USA, the accord as it stood prevented Iran from developing nuclear weapons but Trump trashed it against all expert opinion and sane reason.

Clearly Trump is unfit to lead geese and is clearly a political dunce, whether he has redeeming talents in business is irrelevant as his political blunders threaten not only ALL Americans but millions of lives globally.

So who is making these catastrophic political decisions on foreign policy, clearly not Trump who stated himself that he deferred all foreign policy matters to the Pentagon, the most inappropriate body for the task.

Now a political dunce must take 'advice' from others, the others in this instance are war dogs and know only WAR. So it's no surprise insanity in foreign policy rules. Civilian governments do not defer to their military, they manage it that is why a civilian is commander-in-chief; however, in Trump's case the military makes the decisions. So Trump's disgraceful speech on trashing the Iran accord is parroting the military elite, which Trump recently hosted a dinner for at the White House. We can imagine the affair, all the generals praising and flattering Trump for his (their) decisions. Sick (NPD) personalities thrive on flattery and adoration, and don't the generals know it.

Now, unless the situation changes very soon, war is inevitable, which leaves the FREE and relatively peaceful world -- outside America's military destabilisation of interfered with nations -- no choice but to mount a pre-emptive nuclear attack, as it is sure that the current American leadership begs for war. So it would amount to which nation/s strike first. And be sure, the pre-emptive advantage no nation would voluntarily forfeit. So Trump has pushed the world to the brink of nuclear war and delights in his insanity imagining that it defines him as a conquering hero. However, reality, to which Trump and the Pentagon have no connection, dictates that any nuclear war would immediately escalate as no nation could afford to withhold an all out attack, such is the real nature of a nuclear conflict, though Trump's generals IMAGINE, and have convinced the dunce president, otherwise.

And so we have the tragic nation of America today which has fallen into the pit of insanity and begs to be annihilated, all because the American people have failed to rein in an obvious incompetent, lunatic president.

Good luck America, expect the unexpected, no nuclear nation demonised by the USA could afford to remain complacent in the current circumstances. However, it should be noted that Russia and China loath any prospect of nuclear war, but war is all America has going for it, so unjustifiably demonised nations are forced to act to ensure their own safety. Though all this is very cold comfort for the civilised world that sees the utter futility of the insane antics of Trump and his generals.

Personally I can scarcely believe all this is happening before my eyes. Has the entire American nation gone insane? The unfortunate answer is probably, yes!

See:

<https://www.commondreams.org/news/2017/10/13/recipe-disaster-trumps-betrayal-iran-deal-nuclear-condemned-reckless>

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2936.html>