

Firestorm

by sali Wednesday, Dec 12 2012, 9:43am

international / poetry / post when the tinder is dry and years of accumulated undergrowth

reach dangerous levels
a spark,
only a spark
is required to start a raging, runaway
inferno.

the Canberra cyclonic firestorm of 2003
bears testimony to the rapidity
with which ignited fuel breaks all the rules
and wreaks major
devastation
at blistering speed.

once started
a firestorm is unstoppable nothing is able to extinguish a cyclonic inferno
it must burn itself out.

when social injustices reach alarming levels
and the lies
of corrupt government
accumulate
to form explosive
huge reserves
expect
rapid, violent change,
and unpredictable destruction.

while such storms
are explosive,
skilled fire demagogues
are able to direct their energies and course.

you think ur position, status and wealth protect you, no!
in fact they provide the fuel
that drives the inferno, the roaring storm
that must consume
everything
before it diminishes
and becomes controllable.

we wait patiently
for the inevitable spark to ignite the accumulated fuel and combustible social tinder.

it is well we are ready and able to direct its course ...

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-295.html>