

The House of Saud a Tinder Box Ready to Implode

by tafiq Monday, Nov 13 2017, 12:23pm

international / prose / post

Numerous commentaries by experts on the recent arrests of multi-billionaire Saudi royals by the heir apparent dimwit pretender to the throne, prince Salman, yes the same imbecile that sparked the war in Yemen which he is losing, which has demonstrated to the world his complete ineptitudes and incompetence as a tactician and leader.

However, nothing compares to the recent convulsions in the house of Saud precipitated by the same idiot prince, the Trump of the Middle East, in that a total idiot is on the loose causing all manner of grief which could easily see the house of Saud implode, as there are far too many billionaire princes and other relatives that fear for their fortunes and lives to make this absurd purge tenable.

The dimwit, megalomaniac prince Salman soon to be eliminated, one way or the other

Consider briefly that these house arrests of royals, anyone of which could afford to contract the most proficient and deadly hit men in the world, would hardly sit back and passively wait for their interests and lives to be threatened by an infant upstart moron. Also consider that culturally Arabs excel in brother killing brother, which has kept a potentially powerful group neutered for more than two hundred years. In contrast history records that charismatic Muslim warrior leaders of the past, able to unify large swathes of ethnically diverse Muslims, have impacted the known world to a huge extent, but to think that dimwit Saudi prince Salman has this capability is to think that Trump is an astute politician not a buffoon PUPPET led by his generals and the neocons.

The only sure way at present to assess the Saudi debacle is on an historical and cultural basis, all other analyses are essentially guesswork. And so we are faced with the reality that failing to adequately deal with rivals, prince Salman has possibly triggered the death knell of a totalitarian, primitive regime in Arabia. Surrounding nations are waiting like ravenous wolves for their chance to exploit the situation and possibly to intervene at the right time, though the US supports the dimwit prince and his father; however, reality dictates that the USA could do little to stabilise the situation as it has no expertise in this area, in fact the USA is the destabilisation king of the world, so look out Israel, your stolen tenure in Palestine may also be coming to an end.

Of course the problem is solved by eliminating the dimwit prince and allowing successful and intelligent rivals to work together to form a new stable, competent rulership, which, if the Arab world is ready, as appears to be the case, would have democratic undertones.

However, for the moment no one has a clue, as most analyses indicate, so we shall see. Nevertheless one thing is sure, the Middle East will never be the same again. How does it feel, Benny Netanyahu, you should have chosen your friends a little more prudently?

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-2989.html>