Well, as sure as shit floats so the truth is exposed. According to the UK Independent and Mirror, Putin is 'considering' quitting as Russian leader in order to spend his ill-gotten, graft and corruption money which amounts to hundreds of $billions, which amount would make Putin one of the richest men on the planet -- an impossible outcome for an honest politician in any country let alone impoverished Russia.

Putin is as corrupt and as criminal as the day is long, and his money proves it beyond any doubt whatsoever. It would be interesting to audit his funds and source the origins of his enormous wealth which his wages as a politician could not have possibly produced, which money it seems has more influence over him than Russia's welfare. I mean, what's the point of all that money if you can't spend it while serving as Russian leader, so the latest news is either a tactical ruse to ensure his victory at the next election or the truth, I favour the second option for reasons given.

It is sincerely hoped that Putin quits and then has his wealth audited and investigated by the authorities, as clearly it is blood and corruption money. We also note that Putin is the undisputed world leader in feeding allies to the dogs at their most critical time of need, Libya and Yugoslavia for instance. Syria would have been next except for it's strategic military assets, though we all note that Putin has not DEMANDED that the GROSSLY ILLEGAL intervention and occupation by the Americans and their proxies in Syria be withdrawn immediately under international law and UN conventions, a very strange behaviour for an honest world leader, but not for a corrupt globalist puppet -- after all, which leader in Russian and Soviet history would have allowed NATO/US to install offensive (nuclear) missiles on Russia's land borders, giving a HUGE first strike advantage? That traitorous move alone must have been worth a fortune to Putin.

A final word to that corrupt bastard himself, remember Vladimir, what comes around goes around, think particularly of Gaddafi who you sold out so the globalists could appropriate his huge gold and cash assets and Libya's oil, what makes you think you are immune from the same fate? A bullet or unfortunate 'accident' and your life and money are gone to the same globalist forces you once served -- no-one is immune from assassination, especially expendable political puppets. Perhaps you haven't noticed (read history for verification) but ill-gotten blood money dooms EVERYONE that possess it and tries to spend it -- are you reading this president Donald and the mega-wealthy EVIL global elite; your day will come sooner than you think?
