

A Day

by rayn Thursday, Feb 22 2018, 3:10am international / poetry / post ur hair floats like a sail and turns like a gull in the sea breeze the two of us perched on the cemetery hill overlooking the moving sea and sky gravestones and the city are behind us, this cemetery occupies multi-million dollar potential real estate development but famous Australian poets are interred here, their spirits have protected this awesome space for over a century the wind is fresh and vital with accumulated energy from the sea, which is spent before it reaches the city of the living dead palm branches move slowly singing a slow harmony as they move u do not speak as words interrupt the experience, here, now i turn and watch ur face turned to the wind like a totem on the bow of an old sailing ship, there is nothing to do and nowhere to go Being is more than sufficient, everything is in its space/place u smile speaking volumes without the need of words i respond in kind which prompts u to draw closer and snuggle into my side, my arm automatically allowing ur new position, curving around ur back ending with my hand resting to the side of ur breast u respond and rest it gently on ur breast not a word to interrupt the intimacy or haul us back into petty distractions assured and at peace the two, without interference, become one, effortlessly the plurality of everything here begins to merge into a voluptuous dance of experience/existence bliss, perfection and joy are always available on this earth if we choose

---

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-3201.html>