Turning Wheel

do not forsake me my love, mighty rivers and bubbling mountain streams all irresistibly return to the sea my heart pours its longing tears and love to ur heart, the pulse of creation -i am no match for ur irresistible attraction, born in love and sustained by it eternally, i cannot help but be drawn to it/You storms lash the coast accompanied by howling winds, do you hear my cries? u know i am nothing without you to sustain me the flowers of the desert, bush and forests blush vivid in ur presence offering you nectar, do you see my heart unfurl for only you revealing my naked soul?

the Whore thrives only on the blood of innocents do not forsake me my love, the perversity and pain of this world is beyond description, they have strayed far from ur love and harmony and now delight in their folly, murder and destruction you know their time is short -take the innocent souls into your arms, the children, the wise and true, innocents slaughtered as collateral damage

by the blackest evil that poisons everything it touches, but you know Babylon and her wicked ways, yet the others watch tho they are able to right all wrongs and put an abrupt end to the insanity; they watch silent and passive, which inaction costs them dearly but you know it all and see the consequences before they appear in aware minds i understand, but it breaks my heart to see such perversity tho i also see the hidden perfection behind all existence and why the delinquent require a hard lesson to match how far they have strayed destruction, death and misery on a scale not seen since before our short history, when the dark and light fought openly on the planet and destroyed all their marvels and wonders leaving very few to begin again and end exactly as before i see the wheel of existence turn and know harmony prevails, but not before the complete and utter destruction of the Whore and all her poisonous works
