Iranian Foreign Ministry Spokesman, Bahram Qassemi, said on Monday that foreign forces which entered Syria illegally and without permission must leave.

In his weekly press conference, Qassemi said that the presence of Iranian advisors in Syria was at the request of the legitimate government and the main objective of it was to take part in combating terrorism.

He added that those who entered Syria without asking permission of its legitimate government have to exit its territory.

[Indeed, it is not Iran that overtly breaks international law, it is of course America which considers itself above all laws, as its horrendous, murderous track record verifies. Today in a world of climate and social crises law, order and co-operation are needed more than ever -- quite simply that means there is no room anywhere for rogue nations and mass murdering military bullies -- have we got that Washington? Yankee GO HOME!]
