

A Mystic's Secret

by sol Saturday, Jan 26 2013, 10:39am international / poetry / post

It really is quite plain, not the slightest mystery is involved in a mystic's attainment mystics themselves advertise the fact in their writings never accepting second best or table crumbs when a banquet is on offer mystics want the entire feast the cosmic entirety, infinite creation, 'face to face' with Reality/God, nothing less never compromising this one driving principle for truth/reality facilitates its achievement the ultimate prize is won only by those that do not accept paltry substitutes or second best it is plain enough for everyone to understand, no substitutes accepted complete freedom

no constraints whatsoever; it is more difficult to understand why anyone would accept a shit sandwich when a banquet is offered or a life of mediocrity when exaltation is promised -- the gates of Paradise admit all who would enter do not misunderstand, it's not an easy ride but it's the only endeavour worth undertaking; i arrived at the threshold to Eternity ragged, exhausted, almost beaten but was immediately renewed/rejuvenated when i stepped through into the ineffable Bliss of Paradise

what is astounding is that people would settle for less than their full entitlement

The chains that bind the masses are paper; they bind only as long as the masses remain unaware they are paper.

Disseminate this video far and wide, defy mass media and Google censorship and information suppression.

 Mystical Poems of Rumi

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-367.html>