

The EU to Adopt Broad Range Internet Censorship Policies

by zilk Wednesday, Jan 30 2013, 10:40pm

international / prose / post

Following vanguard nations -- US, UK, Australia and New Zealand -- pushing for Internet censorship, the EU is soon to join the anti-freedom of speech league of totalitarian oriented nations.

New impositions on search engines to suppress sites deemed inappropriate or opposing the dominant corporate mass media discourse will soon take effect. Backgrounding or de-listing dissenting sites will become standard fare, not that de-listing is required as new algorithms easily suppress targeted sites, any decent web-logger clearly indicates the amount of unique hits coming from major search engines and the keyword phrases utilised in the search, so it's a simple matter to monitor the censors and Google is without peer as the chief information suppressor of our time.

We have with other independent and alternative media sites sounded alerts to the plan by ruling criminal plutocrats to choke dissenting views or characterise them as 'conspiracy' sites -- extreme (idiot) sites are actually promoted while rational, coherent opposing and dissenting information is suppressed -- nice trick, but obvious.

It was only a matter of time before draconian censorship policies were implemented, as the powers are acutely aware that one truth defeats a billion lies. The masses have been progressively passified over the decades and are no longer capable of action even to save their own miserable, slave lives. This message is directed to freedom fighters, and free speech advocates outside the system and to the digital warriors responsible for the rapid expansion of the so-called underground or dark net, a network of sites requiring subscription and password access which are not listed on the censored Internet; our sister site, 'Cleaves Newswire,' was one of the first sites to go underground, much to the dismay of the powers that monitored every comma!

It's a losing battle the powers wage, as the capable active underground elite are now out of range and sight -- it's called shooting oneself in the foot. The powers will no longer be able to monitor dissenting sites and counter their discourse or defend against new strategies. The dominant corporate media discourse will soon sour with real contrasting opinion censored. Ruling plutocrats won't know what is developing, or more to the point, what hit them.

Follow the link below for a list of key points and the form censorship policies will take. It is also being considered as I write whether active dissenting sites should now voluntarily remove their presence from the censored Internet and voluntarily join the underground effectively pre-empting the powers.

Any endeavour to prohibit or suppress free speech and expression is doomed to fail for numerous reasons, not least of which is the WILL to FREEDOM and free expression that is INNATE in the healthy species.

While ruling plutocrats continue their counterproductive contractive policies we will continue our expansive policies and agendas -- the outcome is a foregone conclusion as we are forcing ruling elites to ever greater repressive social measures.

🚩 EU Censorship Report

<http://tinyurl.com/ah37tfq>

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-376.html>