

'I'm your girl' -- Gillard flags Banking/Corporate sector

by sal Thursday, Feb 21 2013, 9:35am

international / prose / post

The traditional Oz Party of the people is led by a Corporate sucking traitor of the first order.

It was Gillard who introduced the loathed Carbon Tax, a scheme whereby carbon credits and trading benefits Banks and Transnational corporations but burdens the public with yet another broad based tax. Interestingly, it was/is known that the ETS would have no appreciable effect on climate change and would do ABSOLUTELY NOTHING to avert climate catastrophe. However, true to her LYING form, Gillard sold this policy to the people proclaiming it would help prevent catastrophic climate change.

Following the acrimonious split with the Greens and subsequent revelations of a self-seeking Gillard willing to do anything for herself but nothing for principle or Labor values, the best her spin-doctors were able to come up with is, "she's tough;" even former Labor numbers man Graham 'Richo' Richardson has taken the bait.

To be sure, disconnect and insularity should never be construed as 'toughness' -- indeed, we should never forget that it was Gillard in her capacity as deputy leader after Rudd won office from Howard, who openly advocated allowing corporate bosses to spy on the private emails and other digital communications of their employees! Now, how in hell could anyone call this traitorous bitch a people's representative after that effort to ingratiate herself to the minority Corporate and Banking elite? However, as history records, it worked, the corporates were happy to utilise the services of such a shameless, traitorous bitch! After deceiving Rudd, back-stabbing him and selling him down the river she was installed as PM and has dutifully served her corporate masters ever since.

But Gillard now faces the people she sold out and back-stabbed; whoever imagined she could wipe their memories clean should buy a one-way ticket to the United States of mindlessness -- Gillard is as toxic a politician as it's possible to be.