Driftwood

by minni Sunday, Apr 14 2013, 11:53am international / poetry / post wonder no more why driftwood's gnarled contortions and bleached body appeals to our aesthetic sense it's no secret that a communication that relates to the widest audience is considered superior it's the same with driftwood every contorted turn, gnarled twist replicates our lives like a road map of pain the elements attack everything with equal zeal they do not discriminate between the animate and inanimate, the living or the dead our once slender symmetry becomes a twisted torment of disappointments and mis-directions the longer we are cast adrift at the mercy of irresistible forces beyond our control the more aesthetically pleasing we become to others sucked dry until we are only outlines of our former selves we become famous

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-490.html