

Washington's greatest Fear

by stan Monday, Jul 1 2013, 3:01am

international / prose / post

No, it isn't a nuclear attack on New York City, which is on the cards, or an assassinated expendable puppet President, which is also highly likely, it is the result of unbridled Corporatism. Privatisation of sensitive government activities, off-shoring, especially sub-contracting EVERYTHING, including national security, as the Snowden case so clearly highlights, is compromising national security. Leaking is the Achilles heal of Governments that allow rampant Corporatism to dictate national policy!

Puppet Obama's obsession with leakers now makes sense, as there are few options available to control an essentially uncontrollable situation other than applying terror/fear tactics in the form of draconian laws and severe penalties.

I'm not about to enter into a debate on whether infamous and famous leakers are authentic or not, I am only highlighting the fact that 'leaking' is now a very valuable new asset in the arsenal of elite underground hackers, who often find themselves -- during the course of their day jobs -- privy to the most compromising information on the criminal activities of the USA.

America has more to hide than the rest of the world put together and GLOBAL exposure of their most sensitive (and sordid) secrets could well result in immediate social upheaval and an extremely harsh international response.

Elite hackers do not need to be reminded to remain ANONYMOUS; however, they may need to be reminded/encouraged to publish every fragment of compromising data they discover.

To all digital warriors and elite crewz, PUBLISH and EXPOSE all the rot and filth as you discover it -- the man can't maintain his absurd charade much longer -- it is unraveling and fraying as I write!

The TRUTH of 9/11, anthrax letters, insider-controlled stock market, massive (global) financial crime and the ridiculous assassination of dead-man, Osama Bin Laden, will be revealed sooner than previously thought, and there's nothing the criminal ruling elite can do about it!