

Coming and Going

by lou Thursday, Oct 3 2013, 10:44am international / poetry / post desperate screams

through the block
led me to the unit below, other tenants
already at the door

so beside herself was our hysterical neighbour she was unable to open
her front door,
our urging only intensified her screaming so i assisted an agile female tenant thru the window with strict instructions no matter what she saw/confronted to come straight to the door, which she did

the elderly woman continued screaming, "help, mamma, mamma!" a strange exhortation for a older woman, i thought but hysterical desperation knows no sense

her husband was lying on the bedroom floor convulsing, urinating in his pants and frothing slightly at the mouth
"call emergency, ambulance, say heart attack," tho i wasn't sure, but i knew they responded faster to heart emergencies

he was in bad shape,
i looked at the others
no-one seemed to know what to do but wait for help not good enough in the circumstances,
"who knows CPR?" i blurted silence and blank faces was the response the agile girl was massaging his chest it appeared ineffective something odd occurred, i crouched down pushed her hands away placed my right hand over his heart turned my head over my left shoulder and 'left'

i stayed away until i felt a jolt i turned back in time to see him abruptly return, open his eyes and lock onto mine he was still in shock but he was back in his body

he returned when i left then i returned,
a strange coming and going i held my hand over his heart a little longer then instructed the girl to continue massaging at that point the ambos walked in,

"he had a fit," i said, he's still very shaky the old man's eyes were still locked onto mine, he wasn't quite conscious tho he was back a new blood pressure drug irresponsibly pushed by big pharma was the culprit, half of Sydney on those pills had fits but do u suppose the drug company was held accountable for their negligence and the serious harm they caused?

not likely,
mega-corporations hide behind their bought politicians at these times

Frank Lowy, the same 9/11 Lowy rang PM, John 'aluminium tubing' Howard, to save him from a major tax fraud investigation -- the media had released the details the case was damning for Zionist and former Mossad agent, Lowy; the investigation was dropped, thanks, John.

Howard's protégé, Tony Abbott, is now PM,
it promises to be an unpleasant but eventful tenure

[politicians come at bargain prices these days]

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-843.html>