

Conscious Choices and Quantum Politics

by nano Monday, Oct 7 2013, 12:42pm

international / prose / post

I am a mystic not a physicist so do not expect mathematical formula or equations, simple discourse is sufficient for the transmission of this information/knowledge.

It is known that the universe is expanding faster than the speed of light and so it goes; light moves at a relatively slow pace in comparison to infinity instantaneously filling all space-time/dimensions -- that is fast and incomprehensible to the empirical mind but not so to the intuitive, unrestricted creative consciousness, which is part of the process of infinite creation.

Consider the rather slow speed of light and then take note of the arbitrary form of measurement in 'feet and seconds,' which measures do not actually exist, they are merely conventions/demarcations on the fluidity of creation and so the only 'constant' (the speed of light) is torn apart by the gravitational power of black holes which also swallow time-space as we know it.

The universal medium, aether, through which creation moves is able to transmit a thought from the edge of infinity to any other 'location' in any dimension instantaneously simply because it arrives at the exact moment it is sent -- transmission and reception are the same process, and so 'distance' becomes irrelevant.

Thoughts cannot exist apart from the medium that carry them (aether), we are dealing with substances here, thoughts as things, realities that affect the quality of our lives, the universe does not differentiate it is all one process and therefore equally valid one way or the other.

But where does all this take us? Well, hopefully outside the 'box' (coffin rather) culture has placed us in. Indeed, all cultural conventions are fabrications, inventions, which wouldn't be so bad except for the fact they are all hierarchical structures regardless of which culture we entertain.

Now consider the arbiters of cultural conventions/ laws and whether they have a moral or any other special right to impose their views on us; yes, it becomes apparent that the high priests of culture feed us lies in order to serve their own particular interests -- didn't you know slavery is alive and well in the 21st century? Take a good look at the reality of a Wall St Banker's or CEO's yearly income and compare that with the wages of average citizens. The yawning disparity -- for no good reason -- indicates an arbitrary, unfair, imposed status quo that primarily serves the interests of the arbiters; you see, before our compliance is achieved we must accept and internalise those fictions in order to give them substance, that is how cultures are created and maintained, the masses or majority accept fictions as realities and if those fictions include unfair hierarchical structures then those structures become our realities -- however, the FACT is 'reality' is up for grabs, it is the creative process of consciousness.

Now, don't you think we can do better than the current reality or status quo? Of course we can! We are able to do MUCH better than mass murder, grand theft, permanent war, perpetual pollution and numerous other destructive behaviours.

And now to the big 'revelation.' To effect change in any culture all we need do is first withdraw our conscious sub-scription; no bullets, guns or weapons of mass destruction are necessary, we simply withdraw our conscious and physical support and replace old cultural values with our own creative alternatives.

The cat is now out of the cosmic bag, it couldn't be simpler -- and this cat once set loose, cannot be bagged again!

[Disseminate this story to all people desirous of a better life/society.]

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-850.html>