

Don't kid yourselves - the fight has always been between opposing elite groups

by nano Saturday, Oct 26 2013, 10:57pm

international / prose / post

Recorded history since ancient Egypt (where elites deified themselves) verifies that small groups and exceptional individuals have always been responsible for momentous social and technological change -- the masses have consistently behaved in the same manner throughout history, i.e. as mindless, moronic herd animals until explosive trigger-events spur them en masse into action, after which they return to their servile passive state as mindless herd animals! That is the undeniable social historical reality and types (there are many) like David McGraw, who I admire for his zeal and dedication (but not his blind and misplaced optimism) had better learn late never to flog dead horses.

Too many good people are wasting their energies and efforts attempting to push carts (causes) while unharnessed 'donkeys' watch on by the side of the road, bemused -- if the metaphor serves?

Direct appeals to the enslaved, moronic, brain-dead masses -- I am a realist not a cynic -- are a waste of time; elite planned SHOCK strategies like a Reichstag fire or a 9/11 must be implemented in order to galvanise the herd into action, if indeed herd action is desired!

Today, however, the herd is redundant except as factory fodder and slave labour -- be acutely aware of the times we live in. True elites, not the highly vulnerable plutocratic, moneyed elites, which are completely dependent on others, belong for the most part to the digital underground or invisible hacker fraternity -- their skills afford them complete invisibility and total monetary freedom in a digitally dependent world.

Forget passe narcissists like Assange or CIA, FBI front groups like 'Anonymous,' REAL elite hackers or individual digital warriors require very little assistance from anyone -- understand that it is the nature of today's technology that extremely capable individuals are in effect able to turn the tide on entire nations and most especially superpowers, which are the most vulnerable to attack due to their techno-sophistication!

Today we must look to non-traditional social spaces and non-traditional solutions/methods of changing culture/society in any way desired, which digital elite groups and their known actions have made abundantly clear.

Today the vanguard, indeed the entire engine, presents itself as exceptional, highly skilled individuals; today the 'ghost' lives in the machine, consequently, passe moneyed elites are owned -- they have already been defeated, as time will clearly demonstrate!

Never let it be said that we allowed an opportunity to dispense justice or reduce the world's leading criminal, civilian killing, terrorist nation to ash, go begging!

You have been advised.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-866.html>