

The Repository of All Social Power

Ruling elites find it imperative never to allow the people to realise the truth about themselves.

The previous paper took an ideological perspective, this short piece will be more direct and address issues point blank.

The Enduring Symbol of the French Revolution

Today's elites are acutely aware (and afraid) that certain power dynamics may alter overnight, and that the people may abruptly realise that the shackles that bind them are made of paper and all they need do is make a concerted effort to free themselves from the mind prisons elites have created for them.

Consider the most prevalent form of slavery that exists today -- debt slavery. Now consider the trick elites use to enslave citizens. They use un-pegged worthless paper money, which they print like toilet paper and lend it out to be repaid at interest. Debtors then engage in REAL work/production and create the only real material value any culture possesses to repay fabricated debts.

Consider the minimal real work/effort involved in printing unpegged paper money, which once was only a representative token of an amount of gold held by banks. However, the gold standard was dropped in the 20th century, today the process of debt slavery is even simpler; banks simply input amounts with keypads and create digital figures stored in data bases and viewed on screens. Money was always an abstract commodity dependent on belief for its value but today electronic money has taken the most abstract form it could take. But one thing has never changed, the REAL work/labour required to repay debt.

It becomes plain that people are harnessed as units/slaves of production to repay ephemeral debts to the most scurrilous and unscrupulous tricksters, rogues and cheats (Wall St) the world has ever seen. A nifty trick while it lasted and last it did for about half a century; today, however, the ruse has ended thanks to the overt greed and deceit of the criminal bankers that created the global financial crisis.

People are realising that money is a totally ABSTRACT, fabricated COMMODITY and that their work is more valuable than all the digital debt in the world -- the power of financial enslavement is neutralised by a simple conscious realisation.

As is immediately appreciated, freeing oneself from digital and paper bonds is simplicity itself but continues to evade (by design) the consciousness of a large percentage of the population. It becomes necessary that people begin to DISMANTLE not only the psychological but the physical apparatuses that perpetuate the illusion of bondage.

The simplest method of achieving this is to re-institute PUBLIC or people's banks where real work is translated into real value by the people for the people, NOT for minority parasitic private elites.

From the writers of the New Testament (Jesus rejecting wealth and ejecting bankers from the Temple) to Shakespeare's Shylock, money changers/loan sharks/bankers have been targeted and attacked for the deceptive parasitic vermin that they are -- and to think that the only thing that binds us to debt slavery are perverted beliefs and mental apathy.

We can all start by simply withdrawing our funds from PARASITIC private banks and depositing them in independent, non-bank affiliated people's credit unions.

It becomes evermore evident that the real power for change resides with the people, without whose subscription/support various social power dynamics would fail completely.
